Is a mystery unrevealed, And the love that seems most transparen Is most hopelessly concealed.

We care not for the love while we have it. We know not of love till 'tis lost ; We scatter its treasures broad handed. Nor reckon the ultimate cost.

A touch that I knew of old-That could crown the gloomiest fancies. With an aureole of gold;

And I think how that hand so loving,

Oft met an impatient gesture, Or found no responsive sign. And from yonder painted canvas catch the old, wistful look,

That craved but to lie in mine,

So timidly, mutely jestous Of the love that I gave my book. And I only too well remember

The face and the hand are gone,

How I chafed at the dumb reproach, And swore that no thought of woman Should on my pursuits encroach. Was I blind, or mad, or but heartless?

The light of my life is vanished, am utterly alone. The brain that her glances kindled Is blighted and dead and chilled, And the gorgeous dreams of the future

Can nevermore be fulfilled. I loved as a man who is selfish, She loved in a woman's way; And man's love compared with a woman's

The Absentee Cry.

(From the British Whig when an Election was not at hand.)

"The Ottawa Times prints a CREDITABLE editorial article on our non-resident members, in which it takes a very liberal AND SENSIBLE view of the matter. Of course, as it says, the objection will always be raised in the heat of a contest, but that is no reason why it should be retained long after. Our contemporary's remarks are suggested by an exchange's objections of this kind levelled at Sir John Macdonald, and it proceeds to answer it in this fashion: 'If we hold that Si John Macdonald is not entriled to represent Kingston by his non-residence, we set up a rule that would deprive us of nearly all the leading men of our (the Reform) Party, and that would shut out of Parliament the foremost members on either side of the House. . If there were no other objection to Sir John than that of his place of residence, were we on the list of voters in Kingston, we should say, let him reside in ROOM PAPER as he may choose to present himself. Principle and expediency alike urge us to this position. It is well enough in the desperation of a hot contest at the polls to cry non-residence; but in the calmness of political rest and in the fulness of party succession, I'l IS IMPOLITIC AND IS WITHOUT REA-
