Again approaching the raft, the rescuers this time secured it to the boat and transferred its single passenger to their own craft. No scoper had be touched the ship's deck than his strength, sprung from excitement and the instinct of self-preservation, aban doned him, and he fell unconscious. As he lay on the deck it could be seen that the sores on his body had been made by the cor tinued wetting with salt water, Crystals of the salt were visible on the raw edges of the wounds. The body was emsciated, and th bones at the joints seemed as if about to thrust themselves through the skin. The ordinary black hue of his skin was turned dirty drab. His tongue, swollen to unnatural size, hung half out his mouth, and the wonder was that he could have uttered a single sound. After he was aroused he could only gasp inarticulate moans and point to his mouth for water.

It was nearly a week before his appetite and with it his strength, returned so that he could be questioned. There was no Portu guese scholar on board the Carrie E.
