(From our correspondent.)

SYDENHAM FAIR.

The fair was held in this village on Friday last, but owing to the rain which fell copiously during the day a great many were deterred from being present. However, there was quite a crowd present, who enjoyed themselves to their hearts content in merry and jovial amusements. The people around this village seem to turn out in large numbers to any public display, but in this case, in consequence of the heavy rains, they absented themselves and were deprived from sharing with others the pleasures of the day. The exhibition was creditable to this part of the country, as there were lots of very superior articles exhibited. The stock produced for the show was in every respect far superior to any I have seen in the country. The hotels did a large business, which was easily seen by the crowds assembled there. Sydenham does not lack want of houses of entertainment in that way. As far as I could see, everything passed off quietly, although there was a very large number of people congregated. There was, as in all such places, a number of gamblers, &c. They, too, had a good time of it—made money and took it away. I always consider such parties a great nuisance to any place, but I suppose it cannot be helped.

HYMENEAL.

There is considerable joy in this place in consequence of the marriage of Miss Dawson. She was very much respected in this locality, and I hear that her husband, who resides in Montreal, is wealthy. Miss Dawson is daughter of the Rev. A. Dawson, and I may say that the happy couple received the congratulations and best wishes of the whole neighbourhood for their welfare.

I do not see anything about this village in any way new. There are no improvements that I can see, only a few crossings laid down. The corporation seem very dilatory in this matter. On a wet day the streets of Sydenham are a disgrace to any village in Canada.

RACING.

Among the amusements of the day a trotting race was got up between Mr Mace's bay mare and Mr Goose' black horse. I believe they had three straight heats. It was won by the horse, but given by the judges to the mare. A good deal of controversy has arisen over the matter. M.

MANITOBA ELECTION.

Was the Lieutenant-Governor a Party to an Infamous Job?

The following letter appeared in the Montreal Star of Monday :

SIR,—A queer story, having reference to the manipulation of certain constituencies in the North West by high officials in the interests of a Grit candidate, comes from that distant quarter of the Dominion, and as the particulars are of public interest I give them as they reached me, merely adding that the authority for the truth of them is unquestionable.

It is well understood before the last election that Selkirk would give Mr Morris a majority; "but we must help poor Smith," said His Honour the Lieut.-Governor; and he was helped in the following fashion : The Sheriff (Inkster I believe is his name) applied in due course to the Clerk of the Council for the necessary lists with a view to issuing the usual proclamations. These would be about twenty in number, including the lists for Springfield and St. Paul. The proclamations appeared, but did not include either of these two localities. On the Sheriff being questioned as to the omision, he replied that Springfield and St. Paul would in future be a portion of the constituency of Lisgar and, as to his authority, why Lieutenant-Governor Cauchon knew all about and had directed it. Now, it so happens that the votes thus arbitrarily transferred from one constituency to another are about six hundred, three-fourths of whom were considered by both parties as safe for Mr Morris, assuming which to be true, with a fair deduction for the large estimate, the Smith majority of nine would have been turned into a Morris majority of at least one hundred. As Dr. Schultz said, when informed of the extraordinary proceedings : "It's hard on poor Morris, whom it will be pretty certain to beat, and I don't wan't the assistance." Thus, out of two constituencies certain to return Liberal Conservatives, were manufactured a Grit and a Conservative one, the latter, of course, a little more pronounced as to majority, but that signified nothing.

I must humbly apologise to Lord Dufferin for using his honoured name in so unsavory a connection, but it is not difficult to imagine what a cry of indignation would go up were even the suspicion of interference as between parties attributed to the holder of the high office of Governor-General, and in all probability the recall of the offender would speedly follow. But it must be conceded that as is the office of Governor-General to the Dominion, so is that of Lieutenant-Governor to this Province; each is equally bound by the constitution, and surely wilful violation thereof should be followed by swift retribution; whether the violation be in favour of Grit or Conservative, matters not, the offence is the same. Irrespective of the petition now being circulated and signed, asking for the removal of Mr Cauchon, it will be for the Minister of the Interior to deal with these matters as they have been laid before that official by Mr Morris, who is now in Toronto.—Yours truly,

L. C.

Unspeakable Trouble.

Late on the night after election, when the furious storm was at its height, and the rain was pouring down like an Ohio freshet, a voter out on South Hill suddenly sat bolt upright in his bed, with an incoherent exclamation that expressed so many and such a varied assortment of emotions it was difficult to tell which one was the title page.

"What is it?" asked his startled wife. The voter said nothing, but looked the unutterablest kind of things.

"Did you forget to vote?" asked his wife.

He silently shook his head.

"Did you vote the wrong ticket?"

Again he shook his head, abstractedly.

"Did you lose a bet?"

He shook his head despondently, as though it would have been a very small matter.

"Well, then," she asked, "what is the matter with you? Something has gone wrong, I know."

With a hollow groan he fell heavily back upon the bed, and buried his face in the pillow. "Don't speak to me," he said, in husky tones; "let me go to sleep and forget it." He had just remembered that after he cut the kindling wood, he piled it up on the cistern box, and forgot all about it, and there it was at this present moment of writing, taking a shower bath and breeding smoke and trouble for the morning.—Burlington Hawkeye.

At a special meeting of the Council of Huron College, London, the Rev. John Schultz, Ph.D., D.D., was unanimously elected Classical and Mathematical Professor in succession to the late Professor Halpin.
