DANCING. We gave the opinion of the Bishop of Quebec a few days ago in favour of moderate dancing. We now publish the opinions of Bishop McIlvaine and Bishop Mead on the opposite side, from which our readers may draw their own conclusions :---

Bishop McIlvaine, in his Pastoral Letter, "Let me turn to two objects in which there is no difficulty of discrimination-the Theatre and the Dance. The only line I would draw in regard to these is that of entire exclusion. And yet, my brethren, I am well aware how their universal character and relish, that no harm could be detected in either. And the same precisely can easily be done with the card-table and the horse-race. The exercise of graceful movement in the dance, and the innocent. But what if they were attempted usual interest would be their sufficient condennation. The question is not what we can imagine they may be; but what they always have been, and will be, and must be, in su a world as this, to render them pleasant to those who patronize them. Strip them bare, till they stand in the simple innocence to which their defender's argument would reduce them, and the world would not have them. To be genial to those who most substain them, they must be matters of worldly fashion an Were the trial made of a series as becomes the sobriety and spiritual-minde ness of the Christian character, so that would be nothing inconsistent if every attend ant were a devout and carnestly pious person,

I will briefly allude to some of the objections to it : When taught to the young at an early age, it is attended with an expense of time and money which might b far better employed; it promotes the love of dress and pleasure, to which the young are already too prone; it tempts to vanity and lo of display; it induces a strong desire to ente period, in order to exhibit the accomp to that pointed out by the word of God, and pledged in the baptismal vows.
