Calcutta, March 18.—The assassin of Earl Mayo has been executed. He made a confession declaring that the death of the Vicerory was not the result of a conspiracy, as he alone designed and carried out the murder. He also said he intended to kill General Stewart, who accompanied Earl Mayo on his tour of inspection, to Port Blaine, and was only prevented from fully completing his purpose by the promptness of his arrest after attacking the Vicery.

Fifty years of blight and bloom,

Fifty years of winter's gloom, We have travelled on together

Joy to-day and grief to-morrow.

Fifty years of summer weather,

Fifty years, with soul of truth, Thou hast walked, dear wife, beside me, From the spring-time of your youth-Faithful still, whate'er betide us. Yet the poet, doubting human. Writes that "Frailty's name is woman."

THE GOLDEN WEDDING.

Fifty years! A world has seen Revolutions and convulsions : Yet thy love hath faithful been Through reverses and repulsions. Like a flower in shaded by-ways-Like a tree on sunny highways.

Fifty years—a row of graves Yonder where the hills are parted Tells us how sorrow's wildest waves Left us lone and broken-hearted. Yet, dear wife, the balm of healing Poured from out thy heart of feeling.

Wife, dear wife, the way is short; From the hill the road is winding Soon we'll reach the last great port, Ears grow dull and eyes are blinding. Soon our lives will be a shadow Like the cloud-wing on the meadow.

Grant, O God! that down the aisles Where the twilight folds together I may have her gentle smiles Lighting me like sunny weather, "lill the curtain falling round us Scals in heaven the love that bound us.
