One of the two or three hundred descriptions of Strauss represents him to be a small man with a large nose and long hair, and mounted upon springs charged with electricity.

It is proposed to make a trotting course of the big drum, and to invite the best horses in New England on some off day of the Jubilee to enter for mile heats, best three in five; a prize p impkin and a purse of Boston crackers for the second horse.

The New York Times judges the disposition of Boston by that of its big sister and serious!y asks, "Had the Australian cannibals forme part of the Jubilee entertainment, or had the Montreal, July 4. - Flour-receipts 4,899 | double-headed girl been sandwiched in sales of the higher grades at yesterday's rates; hauser overture, who can say that even at five old supers offered freely at 5,85; 150 bbls dollars the Coliseum would not have been burning of the house of Airlie—an event which others. bbls; heavy prices tending downward; small | tween the Star Spangled Banner and Tann-

One of the numerous stories related in Boston of Strauss is to the effect that when he was in St. Petersburg the fair Russian belles made a frightful series of demands upon him for locks of his hair. Strauss viewed the prospect with alarm. All these sonveneirs would leave him bald. Then he had a brilliant idea. His dog was a huge black Newfoundland. Its shaggy coat was of precisely the texture of his hair, and to-day many a Russian album is enriched with a cherished lock of hair from Strauss's dog. When he was coming to this country he could with difficulty be restrained it is said, from bringing along the dog as a pre cautionary measure for a similar emergency

The Irish Band met with a warm reception in Boston. The audience at the Coliseum. STRAWBERES however, was not large, considering that was "Ireland's day." A fantasia from Faust, by the French band, the astonishing accompaniment of Madame Poschina Leutner in an air of the Queen of the Night, from the Magic Flute, and the performance of the Irish Band, under Clements, were the popular features, although the English and German Bands were received with great favour. The Irish musicians showed their skill under an accomplished leader, who had them in training but a short time, and were kept on the stage for nearly an hour. The enthusiasm was immense and overtopped that aroused by the Anvil Chorus, with its guns and strikers. "The Harp that once thre' Tara's Halls" was sung by . the churus and audience, and the Grenadier band renewed the enthusiasm by the Oberon overture, and on the encore, several English and American favourites. The Grenadier Guards Band sails for England on Saturday next.
