WEDNESDAY EVENING, JULY 10.

The Treaty of Washington and the Canadian Monthly. The Treaty of Washington has not yet become history. It is the eccasional theme of British journalists, who cry all halls to the rising star of our Dominion, amid moral platitudes upon international amity and anglow speculations upon the fate of the Geneya arbi. tration. Here it is the theme of pot-walleping partizana, whose vaunted criticism is but splenetic distribe, and who trick out their The "Washington capitulation," phrase the counterfeit of Palmerston's epithet for the Ashburton Treaty, is the empty sibboleth of those whose stammering tongues have not yet mastered the language of reason. The Canadian Monthly for July has been waited for with some interest. The telegraph had told us that its editor was studying the debates during the late session of the House of Commons, and his recent speech at a Terento University dinner foreshadewed epinions upon, the Treaty, which it was believed would be amplified by a facile pen in the pages of our national magazine. A Meralist's opinions upon the affairs of states demand respect, however far they may be from our own. They appeal to the judgment unbiassed by the passions of the hour, and to patriotism too benign to be selfish. But while the editor of the Canadian Monthly has expressed a murmuring assent to the Treaty in the language of the Hon. Mr.

Holton, he has arrived thereat by processes which command no breadth of view : "Those who regard advantages as insuffcient, and in the end presarious, without re gard for the national honeur, and at the sam should have kept the path of he
