At the conference of Generals Ord and Manrow, it was determined to employ troops, and that three companies of infantry should be despatched to the scene of the outrages at once. Cavalry is now on its way here from Fort Steele, and other points, and will be sent forward without great country, the future destiny of which is delay. THE DUTY OF ORANGEMEN.

In an article in Saturday's Times referring to what the members of the party of Progress are fighting for, we mentioned that among other things it was their desire to do away, as far as possible, with the introduction of sectarian feelings and animosities into the politics of the Dominion. No matter how widely opposed may be the views which people hold upon religious or race, are alike interested in the existence No. 5 Mail of good Government and the carrying out of an enlightened and progressive policy. This is a principle which very few amongst | Eastern Mails . us will be disposed to deny, although the Western Mails. Grit leaders have undeavoured for party East & Western purposes, to arouse old sectarian feuds, and to array race against race, and creed against

They had sense and discernment enough to perceive that although Mr Cr Connor is a Roman Catholic yet as a member of an Administration which deserves well of the people of the country and has sought to do justice to every sect and section, and as a supporter of that policy of Union and Progress which has been so successful, it was their duty as patriots and true Canadians to vote for him. They saw in him only a man whom at 5.30 p.m. they had good reason to believe would do his duty to his constituents and to the country conscientionsly and well; they saw in him a supporter of that Government which has during a critical period dealt with large public questions in a statesmanlike manner, and therefore they voted for him, and against his opponent who had sought to pander to and make capital out of the religious prejudices alike of Catholies and Protestants. The Orangemen of to Isaac Simpson, opposite the Post Office. the county of Essex deserve the utmost credit for their enlightened and patriotic action, and in the interests of Canada it is sincerely to be hoped that their excellent example will be followed by their co-religionists in every constituency where Union candidate of opposite religious views to their own claims their support. We may add that from all we can hear this is already the case, and that in all constituencies where Roman Catholic candidates are running as supporters of the present Governmen, Orangemen are doing all they can to assist them.

Nor is their example lost upon those of an opposite religious faith. No sooner was Mr O'Connor elected, than he started for the neighbour county of Kent, to assist in electing Mr Stephenson, the Protestant can didate of the Union cause in that constituency, and at the present moment he is in Peel, working among his co-religionists there in favour of Mr Hilyard Cameron.

This is as it should be. The religious belief of any man, whether he be Protestant or Catholic, is far too sacred a matter to be dragged into politics or to be appealed to in behalf of this candidate or the other. In selecting a representative, what the electors have to decide is, who will I st protect their interests and be likely to support the policy most calculated to promote the welto creed.
