In Agnes street, Sherbrook street, Tennaut street and other places where those wh had been warned had not removed, the mobs burned. The same outrageous conduct was mour was brought to the military station at Milfield that a new system of outrage was going on in Union street; that, in fact, houses were being burned by the rioters. A troop of doons, Concertinas, cheapest the Dragoons and twelve men of the mounted constabulary rode with all haste to the place, quelled a serious stone-throwing riot which was going on, and took two men prisoners. The rioters speedily dispersed, and the rumour with regard to the burning of houses was sound to be totally incorrect. North street, Carrick hill, to Millfield and the streets adjoin ing were in a state of great excitement during the afternoon. Peter's hill and other streets between the fire of the factions were as deserted, so far as the streets are concerned, as i the plague had visited them. Dragoons, tired looking as after a week's campaign, sat at the corners relieving their weary horses weary looking also, were posted in bodies of about 100 each throughout the district, and the constabulary, who have had hardly any
