When the Kingston, it was claimed that the construction of the railway would be the means of drawing attention to the resources of the rear townships, and that the free toll grant system which enables settlers to acquire land upon terms of settlement only would lead to the settlement of these townships with an industrious, producing population. Land, parily cleared, with log buildings, such as a leg dwelling banished from the public mind. house, stable and barn, can be bought today as cheap as at any time before the railway was even talked off. A number of a ttlers have left within he past three years, some for Manitoba. The railway brings in no farm produce worth mentioning from any township north of Hinchinviting, it is even repulsive. Beyond the river there is a flourishing settlement in the rear of Palmerston, but prospectors as a rule when they reach the railway terminus, turn back, saying they have sees enough of the country; and they are not far wrong.

When the saw mill at the Mississipp is in active operation there may arise an active lumber trade, and the trains on the railway may develope to a length more respectable and encouraging than their present appearance. The Kingston public will in such an event flatter themselves that the county is becoming prosperous. The fact will prove to be, that only the owners of the railway and the owner of the mill will reap any advantage. The country is poor, there is some good land in it, but the greater part is fit only for sheep pasture. Shingle, Board and Sawdust may even have the right to take what pine they find on the settler's land, and if they have, they do not fail to take it. The settler may have to do statute labor, on a road through Shingle, Board and Sawdust's limits, to the construction of which they do not pay one cent, however much their teams may use it in winter.
