JOHNNY'S LETTER.

I don't believe I'd like to hunt In jungles, -at a show I'm just as near a hon's mouth As I would care to go. Suppose the cannibals you saw Had nothing left to eat-Phew !-- they'd have built a tire I'm sure And roasted you for meat.

We've all beer down at Wandma Lee's

And didn't we have fun! We jumped the fences, climbed the trees. And made the squirrels run. High on a load of hay we rode - With Jake and Uncle Nate, We hunted nests, and fed the chicks. And swung upon the gate. We fished and waded in the creek.

And Katie on the eye; It made them look so very queer And, oh, how they did cry ! Dick made believe he had a horse-Twas nothing but a rail-I tied the duster on behind It looked just like a tail. But be got tired, let go the rein.

Then when I ran to call nurse Jane.

Shook apple soft the trees.

We chased the bumble bees.

They stung poor Bobby's nose and ear.

(I ate so many I was sick.)

And tumbled on a log.

I fell across the dog. I have nt any more to say. And I must go to school. 1 missed my lesson yesterday I said "a little buli When teacher asked what bullet meant Why should at it be so

And when they do die, eldest son, or leave more to their soper than to their daughters. Parents need their skins, in order to give all that the have to their children, but they ought non while they are alive, to do far memotor mes them than is the habit with us, and when they die they should take very good care to provide according to their means for their daughters. A woman is a far more helpless being than a man. If the latter be worth his salt he can without great difficulty convert a little money into a great deal. But with a woman this is not the case. Give her a small capital and she has to live on the interest that it brings in, for she has no means to augment it.
