FORTY-NINE SEPOYS, WHO WIRE IN CABUL WHEN THE OUTBREAK OCCURRED, EXECUTED.

(From the London Daily Nows.)

The mullickr, or headmen, were summoned by Gen. Baker, who ordered them to bring out all sepoys of the Aflowed, and within this time thirty men came forward. The General had a rollcall, showing the names of the sepoys known to live or be hidden in Indikee, and as many of these were missing the mullicks were asked to explain their absence. They admitted that twenty men were absent, but promised to bring them in when they returned. Indikee had distinguished itself particularly by firing at our cavalry patrol before Charasiab, and by receiving within its walls the fugitive who fled from the attack of the Seventy-second Highlanders and Fifth Gh ortins when the hills were stormed on the day of the fight. A fine of 1,500 maunds (120,000 pounds) of grain, and 900 loads of bhoosa (chiopped straw for forage) was levied, and the whole population disarmed.

General Beker then visited smaller villoges near and captured 18 more sepoys. There could be little doubt that most of them had been trained as soldiers. They fell into their places, shoulder to shoulder, when the order to start was given, and, keeping time to the quick step of the Sikhs, marched along in good order to our camp. Forty more sepoys were brought in by the mullicks on the 9th and 10th, as well as a Fakir, who had been wounded. This made 89 in all, and they have been dealt
