In the matter of giving publicity to the real or fancied attractions of the United States, and thus imparting an impetus to the stream of migration from Canada thitherward, the PostmasterGeneral is as deep in the mud as the Minister of Immigration is in the mire. The Posta Guide is full of Yankee advertisements similar to those with which the immigration pamphlets abounded. In each of these official Canadian publications the United States territory is painted, with the usual American exaggeration, in the did in Kingston, when his party was genmost glowing colours to intending settlers, and Canada, with its great North- but no friendly invitation to sit for some West, is set down as simply nowhere in the comparison. In face of the choice, which is thus given the public between defeats alone which the hon. gentleman the stupidity or the treason of their pre. has suffered for his party constitute no sent rulers, how perfectly untenable is small claim to Sir John's consideration, the Tory claim to transcendant ability or and to the senatorial distinction. The Bill was not purked, but its mover was subjected to a good deal of spiteful and personal criticiam, in which Tory animus was as usua very apparent. This is generally the case with Tories when any legislation on no matter what subject is introduced by a political opponent. To expect the pre sent House to adopt any measure looking to economy or retrenchment in the public service were too much to expect, and therefore, the defeat of the Bill will create no surprise. It ought not to be too much to expect, however, that in a company of representative gentlemen such a messure as the one in question could be intro duced in good faith by any one of them without having his motives impugned and himself made the target of unworthy suspicion and insinuation.

It is the habit and the affected diversion of Tory journals to facetiously disparage the Hon. George Brown when they are not bullying or abusing him. At one time they pretend to affirm that his usefulness is gone, that he has lost all hold, either personally or through the Globs, upon the public mind, and yet at all other times they proclaim him to the "power behind the throne," and the great dictator of the Reform party. Whichever tack they have taken it has for years been the stock in trade of Tory politicians and journalists to abuse "George Brown," and if their representations had been credited the general public would long ere this have set down this veteran Liberal leader as a political mounter, who could be nothing less not more than a positive bane to the coun try. But the recent attack upon the life of the hon gentleman has served to show how little influence long years of tirades of Tory abuse have had in belittlement of him in the great public estimation The news of his attempted sessination wherever it was flashed, created a senaution second only in depth and earnestness to that occasioned by the recent death of his late friend and colleague, the Hon, Mr. Holton. Expressions of sympathy have poured in upon the intended victim of the murderous bullet from all posing of the rag baby fallacies from a der in Parliament, as such, and most and station, from the Governor-General a young Canadian of whom Canadians of further restrictions of the trade in intoxdownwards. The same ill-success had attended all the hon, gentleman's efforts to unseat his opponent in the courts, on tribunal after another, even to the Supreme Court itself, confirming the validity of Mr. Glen's election, and of course correspondingly disappointing the hope of Mr. Gibbs. From this brief reference to his electoral hard lines it will be seen that the Hop. T. N. has a strong claim upon his chieftain for the seat in the Senate made vacant by the recent death of the Hon. We know enough of "Pinafore" to judge that very few amaur performances could add to its merits; church choirs would be apt to make an amateur representation of it more acceptable to the ticket buying public. The correspondent's plea, that only a few of the bills were printed, and that it was all a mistake, reads like a begging off, sumilar to that of the girl who begged to be excused on the ground that it was "a very little fellow." We would advise a ontinuance in that mood as most be coming under the circumstances to our correspondent and his associates.
