pring Costumes.

Dressy costumes for street wear during the spring and early sammer are made with a fancifully cut surtout, or redingote as it is called, and a full short skirt bore | the hog, you or I ? dered with a heavy thick ruche, or else a cluster of narrow pleatings. The idea in such costumes seems so be that of dispensing with all drapery, and giving the desired roundness by the fullness of the skirt, also by the richness of the material KINGSTON & PEMBROKE ... The fancy for directoire styles has brought this undraped toilet into fashion, and it has also contribut the exaggerated reverse collar and pocket which belong to the directoire costume Brocade is chosen for the long coat, ar either plain satin, silk of heavy qualisatin de Lyon, or velvet for the skir Single-breasted coats have the wi notched directoire collar set on, wh those with double breast have it cut part of the cost. Below the wai line the seams are left open, and the skirts are lined with colored twilled silk, or else satin ; this gives four straight hanging pieces of the coat skirt. Two large buttons enameiled or of bronze, or else painted pearl, define the waist in the middle seams of the back, and under these buttons the waist-line seam begins, as the middle back forms are the only ones that are continuous. The skirt has four straight breadths, and a single gored breadth, which is in front. The width at the bottom is about four yards. Some-
