THE MEMBER FOR MIDLOTHIAN.

The election of the Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone, for Midlothian, is undoubtedly the most signal single victory of the present contest. There were many who sd mired the gallantry and not a few who Torydom in Scotland, but there were comparatively few who promised him success. In the interest of the Marquis of Dalkeith, whom Gladstone has vanquished, all the local influence of his powerful family was plied. Faggot votes by scores were manufactured to render the seat doubly secure for the Tory standardbearer. But all in vain. The impetuous assault of Gladetone, the magic of his name and the inspiration of his presence have borne down all defence, and he is now laurelled with the crowning victory of the campaign. Elected for Leeds by for Midlothian, he may be said to be personally the representative of both England and Scotland, and had he offered for an Irish constituency the result would was a "precautionary measure." No in the present contest. But what sort of a "measure" shall we now call Mr. Gladstone's election for Midlothian ? The people are everywhere conferring upon him an overflowing measure of public confidence, and he is without doubt the most popular and powerful statesman in the realm. While the cloud of defeat and declenaion will overcast that of his great rival the sunset of Gladstone's aplendid career will prove a brilliant one, readered the more so by his retirement from official life during the late parliament. His present success is the reward of a man who has always fearlessly and Ald. Gaskin presented report No. 2 of conscientiously discharged his patriotic duty to the state and to the people, and
