When shall we again be treated by the Canadian Tory press to fresh homilies on the revival and growth of protection in England? For the past year we have not seen so much of it in the organs of our opponents, but prior to that, and especially when our last Dominion election was pending, the whole Tory press of the country, from the Toronto Mail to the Kingston Daily News, furnished us regularly with infallible proofs that Great Britain was thoroughly tired of "one sided Free Trade" and that there as well as here there was to be a great awaken- ing on record. ing and uprising in favour of this question of protection. A strict regard for truth compels us to slightly qualify this statement. For the moment we had forgotten that Mr. Wheelhouse, the memher who during the expiring session of the now deceased Parliament championed the protectionist reaction and submitted a motion that it be "considered"-by a Committee, doubtless did make it an issue in his election. His motion in the House, it will be remembered, commanded six votes, including his own, out of a House of over six hundred and fifty members, and these six were so many nails in his political coffin, for he has himself been elected "to stay at home" during the next Parliament. So much for the revival and spread of protectionist sentiment in England.
