Oh, do not let the sweet spring time
Of life unbeeded fly,
But gather from its choicest flowers
A fall and rich supply,
And let their fragrance sweetly blend With love, upon thy way: Let noble thoughts and kindly words Be thine from day to day.

Oh, weary not in doing well, But willingly impart To those around thee in distress The sunshine of thy heart. For every deed, however small, In kindsess sown, will reap A blessing from that Futner's hand Whose eyelids know 1 o sleep. Is there no dark , unhappy home— No hearth where shadows stray?

Go bring such comforts as itneeds

Thy work is there to day.

Is there no erring, fallen one

Bowed down by sorrow's touch ! Go soothe that heart, that aching brow. It needs thee, oh so much ! For oh! there is an unseen Home, An all-wise Friend on high. To aid thee, and you soon will reap The barvest, by and by. Then let the spring time of thy life.

TUNNELLING THE HUDSON.

GREAT WORK-A NUVEL USE OF AIR PRESSURE.

From a shaft sunk at a distance of swo blocks from the water's edge in Jersey city work on the tunnel under the H ds m is now going corward. A distance of 100 feet has been excavated. The shaft is not to be a terminus. It is simply a starting point for work. The tunnel will be worked back beneath the c.ty mora than half a mile. breaking through the service beyond Erie street, and having its absolute terminus and depet in Jersey Avenue. The tunnel will be two miles long, and three-quarters of a mile n length, will be dr cily beneath the bed of the river. As the river channel is nearest the New York bank and there is wide stretch of shoal water on the Jersey side there will be a continuous slant from the Jersey shore nearly across the river, when a short incline upward will bring the tunnel to the surface in New York. At its lowest point the top of the tunnel will be 102 feet below the surface of the river and about 20 feet beneath the river bed. The New York terminus will be in the neighborhood of Washington Square. By ordinary means it would have been next to impossible to excavate a tunnel through the silt that was encountered at the outset, and must be fought the greater part of the way.

President Haskins devised the plan of sustaining the earth above the excavation by a pressure of air. A powerful pumping engine supplies the force. For safety's sake, there is a duplicate engine, and there are three boilers, because an accident that removed the pressure of air in the shaft would bring about certain disaster and possible loss of life. The original plan was to bore one shaft sufficiently wide for a double railroad track, and high enough to admit of the passage of railroad cars. It was found necessary, however, to alter this, and now the tunnel is composed of two shafts, side by side, like the barrels of a fowling piece, and strengthened as well as separated by a central partition. These tunnels will each contain a single railroad track. The method of using compressed air and accommodating workmen to go in and out of the tunnel through an air lock situate to the whaft. Work in the tunnel never coases. It is prosecuted by three gangs, each gang working eight hours. The earth that they dig out is mixed with water in the bottom of the shaft, and when it has reached a certain depth and consistency it is blown out into the great brick well by the air pressure in the shaft through pipes that lie at the bottom of the excavation. As the excavators work they are closely foilowed by men who line the shaft with plates of riveted iron, and these in turn are followed by masons who construct the arched brick-work that forms the tunnel wall. Catching a Caunou Ball,

Recently at Leeds, John Holtum, a gymnast, was charged before Mr. Bruce, the stipendiary magistrate, with unlawfully wounding E ifth Fenton, a market porter, in the Princess Concert Hall, in that town. Holtum had, during the week been giving performance showing extraordinary strength in the handling of heavy clubs, cannon balls, &c., and on Friday night he offered a prize of £50 to any person who could catch a ball fired from a cannon as he (H itum) had done or several consecutive nights. The challangs had been accepted by three men. and a cannon having been placed in posttion on the stage, a suitable cartridge has been arrested on complaint of Mayor and a ball weighting seven pounds were rammed home. When Holtum called npon those who had accepted his challenge, Ebjah Fenton presented himself, stripped of his coat and waistcoat, and standing about six yards away from the cannon's mouth, declared that he was ready, and placed his hauds in a position. wells in carefully selected spots as a means to secure the projectile.
