The ship on fire at Hell Gate must have been a sight never to be forgotten ror. It is almost a marvel that the loss of life was not even greater than it was considering the suddenness of the accident, and the rapidity with which the flames devoured the vessel to the water's edge. The fact that about four hundred and fifty of the five hundred persons on board were saved is a matter of great congratulation to all, except indeed the friends of the unfortunate tifty who perished, and whose grief will be so poignant as to admit of no consolation. The conflicting elements of fire and water may each claim a share of the hapless victims. The "Commercial Union" movement in Lower Canada is nothing more nor less than a reaction against the taxation tariff of the present Government, which is therefore responsible for the entire agitation. So long as we had a revenue tariff which was lightly on the consumers and yet afforded an incidental protection to manufacturers, we heard nothing whatever of a demand for this Customs Union. Lately, however, the necks of the people have been so galled called national policy, that many are wildly casting about them for relief, and rushing from one extreme to the other, imagine that the total abolition of the Custom House nusiance is the only remedy for the trouble. Customs Union with the United States means a menace to British Connection, and a long stride towards Annexation, and for these and other reasons we object to it. But whatever comes of it the men who have laid the heavy burdens of N. P. taxation upon the masses of the people are directly responsible for the agitation and all Ita consequences.

OUR NATIONAL BIRTHDAY. Throughout the Dominion will be celebrated to-morrow the thirteenth anniversary of our natal national day. The enthusiasm with which the people of Canada with throw themselves into that celebration will attest afresh their strong attachment to their country, and their satisfaction with confederation and the privileges of self-goveonment which it has secured for all. A great many magnificent visions are being constantly in dulged in regard to the future of this country, and much of this dreamy but hopeful contemplation is pardonable enough in view of the territorial vastness and unbounded resources of the country. There can be no shadow of a doubt that when this country shall have received its share of the surplus millions of the old world, together its own natural increase of population, and development of re sources, that it will certainly rank with the most powerful, as it already does wito the most intelligent and civilized nations of the earth. But while we are willing and glad to believe all this we have no sympathy with those among us who flippantly and thoughtlessly tell us that Canada has no present and has had no past. It is quite in keeping with such an unpatriotic disparagement for such parties to say that the country will have no future either, for those who depre ciate the present and the past of Canada generally hint, that absorption into the neighboring republic is to be its inevitable destiny.
