Two Giants and a Dwarf.

Three of the most remarkable men

the century are now on exhibition in London at the Royal Aquarium-the giant Chang, a tea merchant of Pekin; Brustad, a tell Norwegian, and Che meh described, as "the Chinese dwarf, the emallest man in the world." Chang is the largest giant in existence, stands 8 feet 4 inches, and is highly educated speaking five different languages, including English, which he speaks very well, he could distinguish the pricking of each but with the well known sing-song of the Chinaman. He is 8 feet high without his on his bager tips and three quarters of boots; he measures 60 inches round his an inch spart on his wrist. The coneschest, weighs 26 stone, has a span of 8 feet with his outstretched arms, and signs his name without an effort upon a signpost 10 feet 6 inches high. Chang is 38 | ters of au inch apart. His weight is 58 stone greater than Chang's, for his bones are more massive. His age is 35.

Che mah, the dwarf, gives his age 42, sings a Chinese elegy, describes himself with much fluency and variety, and as his height is only 25 inches, appears to exhibited dwarfs to be over three feet high. Sir Geoffrey Hudson, the dwarf whom readers of Sir Walter Scott will best remember, measured 3 feet 9 inches. when he had attained his full stature -London Times.

-----The Fearful Cost of War.

Official returns give the Russian losses in killed and wounded as about 90,000 lately by a letter of the London Times correspondent these figures do not nearly tell the awful story. Over 117,000 Russian soldiers have died in battle or in the hospitale, and 98,000 have perished by sickness and famine while the Roumanians add 22,000 men to the roster. On the Turkish side it is estimated that 90,000 have died in the battle and 50, 000 in the hospitals. To make the frightful list complete it would be necessary to add the uncounted thousands of massacred women and children. We have in this war. Russia would not dare to. show how much her credit would be impaired by contributing her share of it We have before us, however, the figures showing the cost of some of the modern wars in which England has been engagsubject. Herold French war cost her about $5,900,000,000; her share of the Seven Years' war, $415,000,000; the revolt of the American colonies, $490,000,000; the two opinm wars with China, 44,000-000: the Kaffir war, $10,000,000, and the Abyasinian expedition, $40,000,000. vations on Saturday morning. He felt Dr. Tanner's pulse and found it 90. Not contented with this he drew a sphigmograph out of his pocket. Dr. Tanner did not flinch. One of the regular physicians who was looking on asked what that was. This furnished a laugh to the eclectics who were grouped around Dr. Guan. The latter applied the instrument to the wrist of Dr. Tanner. His pulse beat up against a delicate knob in the instrument, which conveyed the motion very much exaggerated to an index needle. Along this point a piece of paper was moved by clockwork, and the index needle traced an irregular line. The degree of irregularity, as shown by the variation of the point from a straight line, showed the strength of the beat. At every beat of the pulse there were three irregularities corresponding with the action of the pulse. Dr. Gunn declared the ac-Theo grandens looks through her sixty years. tion of the pulse normal. Next he pro-Juced a dynometer. It was not the kind of dynometer so frequently seen set up at Concy Island and in the Bowery. It would not do to allow the faster to waste his diminished strength by standing on a platform and tugging with all his power on a crosspiece. His muscular strength was tested by letting him clutch in one hand a small instrument in which was set a spring, the action of which was measured by an index. It was found that his muscular strength, as thus tested, was almost normal Finally Dr. Guna applied an sestimentometer. This was intended to discover whether the faster's sense of feeling had been impaired. It was in principle not unlike a compass. Two sharp points are so fixed in an instrument that they may be brought close together or may be separated several inches. These points were brought within a short distance of each other and spplied to Dr. Tanner's hand while his bead was turned away so that he could not see. He could feel only one point, he said. The points were then separated and again applied It was finally discovered that

The Euglish Labor Market. The home labor market must again be described as generally dull, both the iron and the coal trades showing considerable depression at most centres, though in be what he is described, the smallest Cleveland and Staff rdehire some immen in the world. It is common for provement may be noted. On the west coust of Cumberland there has been a considerable stoppage at the iron works. and in the Leicestershire coal field a large striks of colliers is now in progress. No improvement is as yet reported from the Forest of Doan. At Birmingham speculative activity in the iron trade to rather greater but there is a lack of fresh orders. Under the new wages scale an improvement is expected. At Sheffield the heavy industries are less officers and men, but as we showed active, though the mills continue busy most of the northern ports shipbuilding and marine engineering are brick. In the textile trades no great animation exists and at Nottingham both the lace and the hosiery branches are dutt. At Bradford manufacturers are rather in want of orders, and at Macclesfield the silk trade is poor. At Kidderminster carpet manufacturers are doing well and at Huddersfield yarn spinners are also busy. In Suffolk, agricultural labor is again somewhat unsettled. A large order for navvies for railway construction in Maniseen no estimate of the waste of treasure toba has beer received, otherwise the demand for labor in the British colonies is not specially brisk. Gold-mining in Victoria is, however, again looking up, and several railways are to be pushed forward in Queensland. The Argentine republic is again unsettled.
