

The Daily British Whig

FRIDAY EVENING, JULY 16.

It now remains that the Speaker issued his warrant for the elections for Seabird and North Ontario over two weeks ago, but for some unaccountable reason the Secretary of State has so far hesitated to determine the dates for nomination and polling in these constituencies. The only explanation for the delay is that the Government is afraid to go right on with the elections, and is thus giving its local wire pullers an opportunity to manipulate matters, so as, if possible, to improve the slim chances of the Tory candidates. A Government so strong and popular as the present Dominion Cabinet claims to be should not be afraid of the people.

The infant mortality in New York still continues, from sixty to seventy children per diem falling victims to fatal prostration from the heat. No epidemic could be much worse than this, and the authorities should surely be alarmed and authorized to some precautionary action to try and lessen the force of the fearful scourge. As it is said to be in tenement houses that the majority of these cases have occurred it is not unreasonably conjectured that lack of ventilation has had a good deal to do with producing the unfortunate result. The authorities of New York city will doubtless interfere, and by the enforcement of sanitary provisions try to reduce the mortality; and other places, though exposed to the danger in a less degree, should also take the hint of warning which is furnished by this case in point.

On every possible occasion the cordial hatred between Russia and Turkey is manifested, especially by the former. The recent Berlin Conference recommended a new northern boundary line for Greece, and one, too, that would enclose a good deal of what ought to be Grecian but which happens to be Turkish territory. To this, very naturally, the Porte demurred, and thereupon Russia is reported to have sent an offer of troops to assist Greece in taking by force of arms the disputed territory from Turkey. This would be giving practical effect to the finding of the Conference with a vengeance, and it is said that Germany, Austria and Great Britain were equally unprepared for the suggestion. We do not suppose any of the powers named dream of such but moral suasion and diplomatic influence in the matter, but as against Turkey the Russians are always ready to resort to the sterner persuasives of war.

The threatened partial wheat famine in Russia will be glad news to the protectionists of Canada, whose only hope that the N.P. will not sink in the nostrils of our farmers as a venial fraud is that there shall be a good harvest in Canada and a starvation one in Europe. The latter will, of course, keep up theories of grain at Liverpool. So that if Providence should favor from Europe and smile upon America in the matter of the harvest it will be in the interest of Canadian Protection and to vindicate and illustrate the prudence and prescience of its founders. The more verdant of Canadian farmers may fancy that good prices for their produce will be brought about by a conjuncture of American plenty and European scarcity, but all intelligent and fairly informed men will refer to the result to its true cause, and know right well that the Canadian taxation policy has had no more to do with it than has the Russia Dynamite Fund with the explosion of Etos or Vesuvius.

There is quite a coincidence between the fate of the deceased wife's sister Bill in Canada and in England. In this country there was a decided majority in its favour in the Commons, and in each case it was thrown out in the Upper House by a small majority. In our own Senate it was by the majority of one vote, in the Imperial House of Lords by a majority of eleven. That the adverse majority should be so small in our Conservative an institution as the British House of Peers may be regarded as a decided moral victory for the measure, especially when it is remembered that eleven bishops were present at the division, ten of whom voted with the majority. The Prince of Wales and his two brothers, the Dukes of Edinburgh and Connaught, went to the House that night on purpose to vote for the Bill, and there is no doubt that it will ere long become law in England. Such a foolish and obsolete restriction upon marriage as this Bill proposes to rescind should be at once removed, and with all due deference to the small majority in Canada who think otherwise we hope and expect to see the measure pass both our Houses of Parliament next session.

As a one-time Kingstonian, we were proud to record the fact of Mr. Ryan's election to Parliament as member for Marquette. Later on rumors reached us that he would before long be elevated to a Judgeship in Manitoba, in which case congratulations would again have been in order. It was felt that some handsome public recognition was due for his coolly turned his political coat and given tangible proof of fealty to his new masters by offering his seat to the Chief Justice when the latter was bounced from the representation of this city. It was only a question as to what judicial dignity would best mark the Premier's high appreciation of Mr. Ryan's distinguished services and sacrifice in his behalf. Owing to the illness and consequent physical incapacity of Chief Justice Wood, of Manitoba, it was conjectured by some that Mr. Ryan, though still a young man, might possibly be elevated to this exalted position. The humiliating disappointment of Mr. Ryan's friends therefore can be better imagined than described when it transpired that the seat of posts for which he had sold himself, and for which he had offered his seat to the respected Sir John, was a miserable local Judgeship. It is a favorite saying with the present Dominion Premier that every man has his price, and his estimate of Mr. Ryan's value in this case is anything but flattering to the retiring member for Marquette. We never dream that Mr. Ryan would throw to the winds his parliamentary prospects for a paltry local Judgeship.

GLADSTONE AND THE IRISH BILL.

Lord Lansdowne's defection from the Gladstone Government will not materially weaken it. He is one of the largest landowners in Ireland, and is one of the absentee landlords, and his class between whom and the Irish peasantry there is really love lost away. Lord Rosebery is ready to succeed him in the Under Secretaryship for India, so that the vacancy in the cabinet will be of brief duration. The Irish members are, some of them, passing a very fatuous course in defiance to Mr. Forster's Compensation Bill, in behalf of which the Government is suffering such an amount of opposition and persecution. Mr. Parnell and his less than a score of personal followers are doing their best to earn the title of ingrates, and to sour the English Reformers from doing anything further in their thimble-bell. While Mr. Gladstone is risking the popularity, and according to some, the very existence of his Government, in order to do justice to the Irish people, Parnell and his obstructionists bitterly oppose him because he cannot go the entire length of their demands in regard to the land and the landlord question. Because the measure is already deemed too sweeping and radical a little fear of Gladstone's Whig adherents, nearly a hundred in number, have already been alienated, and with an unspcakable meanness Parnell and his band seek the very difficulty into which Gladstone seems to be cornered by his efforts in behalf of the Irish people as the opportunity for which they have been waiting, and by threatening also to desert him hope to force his hand to concession of their demands in full. We cannot see anything chivalrous or magnanimous in this piece of sharp practice. It is thankless in the extreme, and will in the end do the country of which these obstructionists are the falsest of sham champions much more harm than good. The determination with which the British Premier sticks to his measure of amelioration, in spite of the opposition alike of the enemies and the bogus friends of Ireland, is worthy of all acclamation. The sight of such a veteran political gladiator, who has been in the Parliamentary arena since five years prior to the commencement of the present reign, and yet is daunted not by threat of defeat in his own party nor by the avowed Opposition in front of him from what he believes to be for the good of the country, is a fresh proof that the courage for the right which has always been the distinguishing characteristic of this venerable Statesman's career.

DIFFERENCE OF OPINION.

Doctors differ and so do society men. At the Hamilton Orange demonstration Mr. Parkhill, M.P.P. for Simcoe, and one of the bitterest Tory pills in the Ontario Legislature, counselled his hearers to convert their society into a grand political organization, so as to attain to an ascendancy in the Ontario Legislature. Per contra, at the Orange demonstration at Kemptville, Mr. Francis Jones, ex-M.P., and also a Conservative, condemned the prostitution of the society to political purposes and denounced the present Dominion Government for the use they had made of the order for selfish party purposes. Any one conversant with the facts will endorse the advice of the latter speaker and repudiate that of the former. It cannot be vitally injurious to the institution to be made a tool of by Tory tricksters, and yet of this fact the servile scribe of the large majority of Orangemen furnishes abundant proof. Mr. Jones' sentiments have the ring about them, and should be taken to heart by every Orangeman in the country. On the contrary Mr. Parkhill's pernicious counsel, to make the body more than ever a political institution, should be universally eschewed and condemned.

Representative Railway Employees.

To the Editor of the British Whig. Dear Sir, - When the people of this city were asked to vote the large bonus to the Kingston and Pembroke Railway they were misled by the promoters of the scheme that the cheap produce brought over the road from the back country would more than compensate them for the money asked for. They were not informed, however, that when the Bill was read in committee on the different trains would be allowed to monopolize all the benefits, as I am informed they do. It is a notorious fact that the conductors (even the newspaper boys) buy up the goods, market produce, berries, etc., in fact everything they can make money on before the train reaches the Kingston station, thus obliging the poor man to pay the highest price for what he would otherwise get at a cheaper rate. I hardly think that the Directors of the road are aware that their employees act as middle-men between the residents of the back country and the citizens, thereby making a handsome profit at the expense of the honest and upright citizen. I have my own official positions, to line their pockets. The sooner the Directors look after these speculative employees the sooner they will be entitled to the thanks of the people. A Poor Man.

Shirking a Meeting.

To the Editor of the British Whig. Sir, - It is a curious thing that in the cold month of January aspiring gentlemen will tap at our doors in the night, arouse us from our beds, and themselves at our feet, and beg of us to vote for them, promising to do justice to us and the city generally if elected. And yet these gentlemen, who crave for support, etc., in the evening, in the day look at us as if we were a plague. Alderman run at last evening's meeting, and when they saw among the crowd that a young man was going to take us up, they were going to take us up. It is a good job we have one man who cannot be buttonholed. Yours, etc.

FRENCH HOLIDAY.

London, July 15. - A Paris dispatch says the national fest was a brilliant success. When the booming of cannon in the morning ushered in the rejoicing, the city had been profusely decorated. Tricolor arches, flags, banners, and other ornaments mingled with the tricolor. The fashionable quarters of the city, though not absolutely bare, were very sparsely decorated. Nearly all the shops were closed. The ceremony of distributing flags to the army occupied half an hour. About five hundred were distributed amidst half minute gun firing and hand playing. After this part of the ceremony General Faur and staff entered the city, followed by the President of the Republic, and the march past began. The Algerian troops, Zouaves, Chasseurs d'Afrique, and Spahis were particularly applauded. The infantry and cavalry were dressed equally. At 10 o'clock the carriage traffic was suspended, and the streets were teeming with promenaders. The site of the Bastille was traced out in blocks of granite on the ground. The illumination of the Bastille was a very fine affair. The figure representing the Republic a shower of bombs lighted up the scene with every color of the rainbow. Never within the memory of Parisians has so colossal an effort been made to provide one of these delightful Frenchmen. Telegrams from Rouen and other large towns show that the provinces manifested as much enthusiasm as Paris. Only one short shower in the evening spoiled the promenaders.

IMPERIAL HOUSE.

Compensation Bill Opposition in the Lords - Whigs in Council Afghan Expenses. Manchester, July 15. - A London correspondent states that it is admitted on all hands that the Irish Compensation Bill cannot pass the House of Lords, and that Mr. Gladstone is being strongly urged to abandon it. He shows no disposition to do that, though, though the consequences of his persistence threaten to be more unfortunate than at present appears on the surface. Some of the correspondents probably lapse at further withdrawals from the Liberal party - a danger foreboded by the declaration of Lord Edward Cavendish against the Compensation Bill yesterday. The whole aspect of this subject will probably be changed by the results of an important meeting, about to be held by a large section of the Liberal party, who desire to make their influence as effectively felt as possible.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

Steam Yachts are now going a brisk business. Gov. Alford has made a large addition to his cottage. At Grimby camp fall wheat, 45 bushels to the acre, has been cut. Farmers in the vicinity of Quebec have commenced to cut their hay crop. Only two cargoes of lumber have gone to South America this year from Montreal. The year's revenue in France will exceed the budget estimate by twenty millions francs. - Writes for the three vacant constituencies will not be issued until after Sir John returns from England. - Rochford's new paper, "The Daily Herald," which appeared in Paris on the 14th, declares bitter war against the supporters of Gambetta. - The failure of an ice man to put in an appearance will cause more real trouble to a household than a pen can write. - Countess de Onorio bills, Peterboro, are in circulation. The back is light green, and the mouth in one side is badly engraved. - Sara Barnhardt's managers have decided that the highest price for admission in the States shall be $3, and the lowest $1. In London the highest price was $25; lowest, $1 25. - Smuggling has increased to such an alarming extent on the Niagara frontier that an additional force of men has to be employed to protect the revenue. Similar reports come from New Brunswick and Quebec. - The Mecon (see Daily Herald) reports that the Mecon (see Daily Herald) reports that a few miles from Mecon. It was so freely unbedded in the tree, that it had been cut out with an axe. The matter is being investigated. - An advertisement in a newspaper says that a man who had been in the habit of carrying a gun in his pocket, the gun being in a bag, was just put in the stocks for an offence.

A TOWN DELUGED.

Northampton, England, submerged Swollen Streams - A Sweep It Things Off. London, July 15. - A terrible thunder storm has deluged the town of Northampton, the capital of the county of the same name, and seat of Mr. Braithwaite, member of Parliament. It is situated on the River Nene, a navigable stream, and the river is crossed at Northampton by the railway bridge, about 60 miles northwest of London. The storm was almost unprecedented violence, and a wonderful amount of water fell in a short time. The Nene at once began to rise rapidly, and soon the water flowed into the lower windows of the factories. Some of the latter standing in unusually exposed positions, are nearly submerged. The swelling stream presently reached the town, and the people, unable to rescue their household goods, are endeavoring to dam the course with clay, but with little effect. Others who had a somewhat larger warning, succeeded in escaping to high ground with part of their household goods. Great damage has already been done, and as the deluge is sent, the river is reported still rising. All factories are abandoned, and the banks are gazing helplessly on from all attainable points in the vicinity. The river is expected to rise by the heavy stone bridge, when it is feared will be swept away. Much damage is also done to the Grand Junction Canal and railway structures. The upper part of the town is located on a slope, and the inhabitants are mostly gathered there excitedly witnessing the scenes.

Presence of Mind.

The last horror of the Sound was chiefly due to want of presence of mind. By daylight, with abundance of life preservers and land close by, nearly every one could have preserved by a little self-command. As this is the season when there is an epidemic of fatal accidents, let us say that already some have been enjoined from the press and pulpit, in all Sunday schools and picnics. In our absence, at dusk, when there were none but women and children at home, a stout tramp pushed into our chamber, frightened the cock so much that she could hardly sleep. Our better half stepped into the hall and called us with her usual strength of voice. Not knowing that the man asked for was thousands of miles away, the rubber disappeared as rapidly as possible without taking a pin. At Canton, years ago a fire burst out in the house where we were enjoying an ordination dinner. There was no engine anywhere, no extinguisher. The house was all wood, and the fire spread with a fatality of hay. The guests were chiefly females. Quick as a flash a double line was formed, nearly all gaily dressed ladies, and the buckets flew one way empty and more gradually back when they were full. The quarters of the household were saved, and the barn escaped entire. (Cambridge Mass.) Tribune.
