SATURDAY EVENING, JULY 24.

The recent discourse of Henry Ward Boecher, intended to preach sway the effect of his Fourth of July sermon, has not given general satisfaction. Referring to it an American exchange says that "he let off such a lot of fireworks before he got through that the congregation was mighty little wicer as to what he did mean than when he began. Beecher is such a tremendons fellow at twisting words when he wante to that it would take a mighty smart man to pin him down to any particular point." Further on, and in proof that his Fourth of July oration has not been wiped out by his subsequent definition of his creed, our contemporary maintains that he was particularly em phatic in declaring that "it is a gigantic lie, told with much circumstantiality, that men were created equal and then fell. If Beecher has been misunderstood in this matter it is very evident that he has his own oratorical recklessness to thank

The navvy speculation is in a bad way. The ocean passage of the 3,000 men not, it seems, to be wholly prepaid ; bu by an arrangement between the Canadian Government and the Allan line, the ocean fare to be paid by the navvies themselves is to be £5, the fair presumption being that the Dominion Govern ment pays the Allans the amount of the reduction, or £1 6s. per navvy. Then our Government pays the passage of these men clear through from Quebec to Mani tobs. For stronger reasons the Government should pay to the same destination the fare of any Canadian workingman who wants to go there for employment on the railway. The worst of it is that after the passages of these navvies are prepaid they are perfectly at liberty to stop at any point en route, and thus the passages of hundreds of men is being paid from Quebec to many points in 'the Western States, and thus the money is being literally thrown away. The whole thing is in the first place unfair to Canadian workingmen, and in any case bungling failure and fraud. Sir A. T. Galt, and the Government he serves, will not win immortal renown by their Pacific Railway navvy policy.

stoical sort of fortitude yesterday that will compel the admiration of many, but his attempt to assert his innocence of the grime of murder for which he suffered Dominion, but he did not put forward will not command much credence in the the ridiculous pretension, so often claimpublic mind. All his papers and poems el for him in this country, of being the will prove that he had allowed revenge for imaginary wrongs so to grow upon him as to ripen into the deliberate intention to murder somebody, and there was no evidence to prove that the Hon. George Brown was not one of his intended victims; while the actual seeking him out, inquiring whether he was alone in his office, and then the actual shooting, all go to discredit the prisoner's assertion of his innocence. The plea that Mr. Brown's act in seizing the revolver was the incidental cause of the crime is quite untenable. If this had not been done he would have got the fatal bullet in some more vital spot. Under all the circumstances of the sase the melancholy end of the unfortunate wretch must be considered a righteone judgment for a most atroclous deed. The letter of Bennett's wife may well be pronounced a vindictive and inhuman act. Such a terrible position se her faithless husband occupied the day before his execution might well have disarmed her resentment, but she seems to have followed him up to the bitter end with recriminations and, with the one motive of making her own case right, to have gloated over his fate at the very foot of the gallows. However wronged she might have been she might at least have the Dominion Government are notorikept quiet while the shadow of death was settling down upon the man she claims to have been her husband.

HOBBY-HORSE CANDIDATES-

There are now four regularly nominat ed candidates in the field for the Presi dency of the United States. This will give our neighbours au ample choice. A first sight it may seem a little curious that all four candidates are 'Generals' until one remembers that at least every second citizen of the Great Republic is either 'General,' 'Judge,' or 'Colonel.' Generals Bancock, Garfield, Weaver and Dow, them are the Democratic, Republican, Greenback and Prchibition candidates respectively. It may be thought that the small vote which will be polled by General Weaver, in the rag money interest, or by General Neal Dow for the prohibition of the liquor traffic, will not have any appreciable effect on the result It must be remembered, however, that the whole nation is pretty evenly divided as between the two great political parties and that an unusually close contest is expected. New York, for example, has been claimed as a pivot state, and that which ever way its electoral vote-may be cast will determine the ultimate result. was the recognition of this fact and the fear that without Tammany help the State could not be carried by the regular Democrats that constituted the real bar to Tilden's nomination. So it may happen that though the two men whom w may call the hobby horse candidates may only each of them poll a very small vote that vote may be the means of turning the scale in one or two of the States of the Union. For instance as every body knows, the temperance and prohition element is very strong in the State of Maine, and Neal Dow has been for years the central figure of the movement. It is said that the large majority of prohibition men are also Republicans in politics. Under such circumstances if a large temperance vote be polled for Dow in this State it may so weaken the Republican vote as to result in a majority for the Democratic electors in what is saually known and counted upon as a Republican State, And in the evenly balanced condition of parties throughout the country an unexpected slip of this sort may prove of vital importance and may, indeed, by turning the scale, decide the issue of the whole struggle. It is this possibility that gives an adventithe present Government will not be the tions importance to the hobby-horse minority candidates. There is not a ghost of a chance that either of them will carry a single State, but in the way we have pointed out they may detach a sufficient number of votes from one party or such as shall be re-engaged in the interthe other to throw one or more States im.

into the hands of the party which could not hope for success unless its opponents were temporarily weakened by some such means From present judications it would seem that the Republicans have more to lose in this way than the Democrats, although it is possible that a considerable number of rag-baby Democrats may prefer their fiscal hobby to their re gular politice, and so vote for Weaver.

AT WIMBLEDON.

The Canadian Wimbledon, team thi year showed to better advantage at the banquet than at the target, Although some of the shooting done by our boy was very creditable it must be said that their effort to recover the Kolapore cup was acarcely up to the mark of a credita ble defeat. To be beaten by the British team to the tune of 74 points was a prett bad dressing, and one which does not compare very favorably even with the narrower defeats of former years. That it was a pretty bad licking was implied n the consolations offered by Sir Henry Fletcher, and echoed by Earl Kimberley, who trusted that the failure of this year would not deter the Canadians from future competition, and hoped they would be rewarded with better lack next time After all the non-success of our marksmen in the field seemed to make them none the less the objects of admiration among the old land notables who honored the Canadian camp by their presence. they could not congratulate our men their shooting they did upon their conn try's greatness, its prospects, its militia its public spirit, its political institutions and everything else we have worth mentioning. Lord Kimberley was especially complimentary, and in three several speeches he found it necessary to make on he festive occasion was loud in his praises of the Dominion and full of assurances that England appreciated the value and in portance of her chief colonial arm Empire. "Englishmen," he said, "re garded everything which concerned the Dominion as of the highest importance They expected great results from the union of the two countries." As to the Canadian speakers, including Sir John Rose, Sir John Macdonald, Sir Alex Galt, Sir Charles Tupper and Colone Williams, commandant of the team, it may be said of one and all that they said nothing of which their countrymen Bennett certainly met his fate with a may not well feel proud. The Dominion Premier merely congratulated himself on having lived to see the scattered provinces of Cauada knit together in one father of Confederation. He also very impartially divided the historical credit of Confederation between the two great political parties in England, as each had had a hand in its consummation. The

When the result is pretaely the same, however, it is no great credit to be absolved from the imputation of treason by substituting therefor that of cupidity, monopoly and public greed. The latter policy is just as bane ful and just as discreditable as though it aprang from a traitorous desire to da mage the country. Nay, it is even worse. was no redeeming feature in the treachery of Judas that he was paid in shekels for his act of base betrayal. The palliates the vile mis-feed. The Handford Case. (London Free Press ) To the general regret, it appears that the Handford scandal is about to break out afresh. The complaining deacons in this charge against Mr. Handford charged him with criminality with one Mrs. G. a grass widow, rather prepossessing in appearance. When the examination came on this lady had left the city, and the Investigating Committee tried in vain to juduce her to return and give her evi lence She, however, wrote them a letter. Mrs. (), recently returned to the city and finds the church doors closed against her. She demands admission and appears before the deacons and makes a clean of recognition. He expressed a genuiue breast of it. Her evidence goes to show that Mr. Handford induced her to leave the city as soon as the Investigating Committee was organized, and paid fare to Rochester. He himself, wrote and he hoped some day again to set foot the letter for her to the Committee, she copying it. She deposes that for two years she has been Handford's concubine criminality being indulged in both in the church and elsewhere ; that they were once discovered and had to pay hush money ; that Handford got tired of her men to England, whatever may be the and took up with Mrs. Leslie, using her in like manner; that he supported her as long as she engaged his fancy, but cultivate and help to perpetuate cordial that he would not contribute to her support as soon as he got another, and that to its creditors. he has left her with a blasted character. penuless. The County Inspector. To the Editor of the British Whig Dear Sir, - Might I, through the WHIG ask Dr. Aguew how much longer he means to keep the Frontenae teachers out of their Legislative grant? The teachers of other counties are never kept later than the 15th of July, whilein this county they must sometimes wait till well on in Auguet. It is no argument to say that the reports are not in, for they should be in by the 10th of July, and any section not sending in its report till after that date ought rather to be punished by losing its apportsonment than that all should be punished for the negligance of one.
