THE GREATEST
Wonder of Modern Times!
HOLLOWAY'S
PILLS AND OINTMENT.
The Pills purify the Blood, correct all disorders of the Liver, Stomach, Kidneys and Bowels, and are invaluable in all Complaints.
The OINTMENT is the only reliable Remedy for Bad Legs, old wounds, sores and Ulcers, of however long standing. For Bronchitis, Diphtheria, Coughs, Colds, Gout, Rheumatism and all Skin Diseases it has no equal.
Beware of American Counterfeits.
I most respectfully take leave to call the attention of the public generally to the fact, that certain houses in New York are sending to many parts of the globe SPURIOUS IMITATIONS of my Pills and Ointment. These frauds bear on their labels some address in New York.
I do not allow my Medicines to be sold in any part of the United States. I have no Agents there. My Medicines are only made by me at 533, Oxford Street, London.
In the books of directions affixed to the spurious make is a caution, warning the public against being deceived by counterfeits. Do not be misled by this audacious trick, as they are the counterfeits they pretend to denounce.
These counterfeits are purchased by unprincipled Vendors at one half the price of my Pills and Ointment, and are sold to you as my genuine Medicines.
I most earnestly appeal to that sense of justice, which I feel sure I may venture upon asking from all honourable persons, to assist me, and the public as far as may lie in their power, in denouncing this shameful fraud.
Each Pot and Box of the Genuine Medicines bears the British Government Stamp, with the words "HOLLOWAY'S PILLS AND OINTMENT," thereon. On the label is the address, 533, Oxford street, London, where alone they are Manufactured.
☞ Holloway's Pills and Ointment bearing any other address are counterfeits.
The Trade Marks of these Medicines are registered in Ottawa. Hence, any one throughout the British possessions, who may keep the American counterfeits for sale, will be prosecuted. Signed
THOMAS HOLLOWAY.

HER LAST LETTER.

'Tis but a line, a hurried scrawl,
And little seem the words to say,
Yet hold me in reproachful thrall,
"You quarrelled with me yesterday;
To morrow you'll be sad."

Ay, "you'll be sad," the words are few,
And yet they pierce my soul with pain;
Ay, "you'll be sad," the words are true;
They haunt me with prophetic strain;
"To-morrow you'll be sad."

We quarrelled, and for what? a word,
A foolish speech that jarred the ear,
And thus in wrath our pulses stirr'd;
Then came her letter: "Dear, my dear,
To-morrow you'll be sad."

Few words! half mirth and half regret,
The last the hand should ever write—
Sad words! I learned long ago, and yet
Fresh with new pain to ear and sight;
"To-morrow you'll be sad!"

INCREASE OF TRAFFIC.

WHAT IS BEING DONE AT THE G. T. R. WORKSHOPS AT POINT ST. CHARLES.

The works of the Grand Trunk are at present exhibiting signs of great activity. The shunting yard is being ballasted at great expense to the company, and the shops of the car and boiler departments are each being extended 300 feet to accommodate the extra workmen which have had to be engaged during the present pressure of work. The locomotive department is particularly busy and is at present turning out locomotives at an average of one a week, and will continue to do so for some time. Most of the engines made are for the freight service between Montreal and Toronto. They are the strongest and largest engines used in Canada, and are made with three pairs of driving wheels. Next week the department will turn out two "tank" engines for use on the Montreal wharf and the Bonaventure street shunting yard. These engines, which are the design of Mr. Herbert Wallace, of the G.T.R., will be the strongest engines used in the shunting service, and will not burn nearly as much fuel as those heretofore used. At present there is some talk among the officials about erecting a foundry at the works for the manufacture of car and engine wheels, which at present are cast by Montreal founders. If this foundry is erected the works will be furnished with all the machinery needed for the manufacture of cars and locomotives, even to silver-plating. The two dining-cars which were turned out this summer by the car department, and which are now running on the western express, are a decided success, and frames of several additional ones are at present being made.—Montreal Star.

A Perilous Predicament.

One of those thrilling episodes that occasionally punctuate the life of a miner and illustrate its perils occurred recently in the Wallace and Ferguson mine, at Sheep Ranch. The shaft has two compartments and is four hundred feet deep. Both compartments are used for hoisting purposes, signal bells being utilized to enable the engineer to distinguish between the divisions of the shaft. One day last week three men went down in the bucket, their destination being the two hundred feet level. One of the trio, Thomas Taggart, got into the bucket, while the other two stood on its top and held on by the cabls, the usual way. Arriving at the two hundred foot station the two men stepped off into the level, and Taggart had got partially out of the bucket when the bell of the other compartment gave the signal to hoist. The engineer mistook the signal and hoisted in the compartment in which the men had just gone down. Taggart was in the act of getting out of the bucket—had one leg out and one in, in fact—when the latter started up the shaft. The bucket, with Taggart hanging to it, had proceeded but a few feet when it tipped over, precipitating the unfortunate man headlong down the shaft. At the moment of falling—in utter desperation, as a drowning man grasps at a straw—Taggart caught at the rocky wall of the shaft with his hands. By a miracle of good fortune one of his wrists caught in a wedge-shaped interstice in the side of the shaft. Taggart hung by one arm, suspended in mid-air, with two hundred feet of space beneath him. No one can have the faintest conception of the unutterable horror of such a position. Enveloped in impenetrable darkness, suspended by one arm over an abyss that invited him to certain death if his frail support should give way, and alive to the knowledge that the descending bucket might precipitate such a catastrophe, Taggart's situation was so inexpressibly horrible that its contemplation makes one shudder. Luckily, however, his comrades comprehended the situation of affairs, and by acting promptly prevented a tragic ending of the accident. Taggart was released from his perilous position, escaping any more serious injury than a severe strain of the physical system and mental faculties.—Calaveras (Cal.) Chronicle.

Boat Building.

Robert Watson Boyd, the English champion oarsman, in conversation with the representative of the Newcastle Daily Chronicle, said he noticed a remarkable improvement in the boat building and scull making of the American and Canadian firms engaged in this business. The racing shells turned out of hand are not such good wear as the solidly constructed craft produced by Swaddle & Winship, but they are much lighter, and for the purpose of rowing a single race in, Boyd regards them as far superior to the home-made article. The boat that Hanlan rowed in was built in Toronto, and although he had previously rowed a couple of matches in it when fully fitted it weighed but twenty seven and a half pounds. Rapid improvement is the order of the day on the far side of the Atlantic in all that concerns racing boats and their fittings. Already the old forms of the swinging rowlocks are cast aside, and Hanlan rows with an improved invention of this kind which is very clever. Ross also rowed with a very good one—a 'Davis rowlock.' The sculls made are lighter than the best of the English make. Boyd took half a dozen pairs of the latter across the sea with him, believing that he would be able to dispose of them at a profit, but as a matter of fact no one would buy them at all for racing purposes, and he finished by giving them away. Boyd predicts that unless the English boatbuilders move with the times in producing light and fast racing boats, and in improving the fittings they will lose their American customer altogether.

THE SORROWFUL TALE OF A MAID FROM MANLIUS—HER EXPERIENCE IN KINGSTON—RUINED AND THEN DESERTED.

(Rochester Democrat.)

Late Tuesday night a young woman entered Congress Hall and asked for accommodations. She was alone. Her name was placed on the register and she was assigned to a room. Her effects, whatever they may be, were carried in a small square pasteboard box tied with twine. Yesterday morning she came forth and breakfasted. There was a peculiar action about her that struck the gentlemanly clerk as strange. From the nature of their business, clerks obtain a certain knowledge of human nature. The bill was referred to in a most gentlemanly manner. She did not have money enough to pay. Her husband was to meet her, and he was a man of wealth. She deposited the pasteboard box in her room and remained there for several hours. Then there was an inquiry at the office for a telegram. None had come for her. She said it was strange. He had promised to telegraph. She went to the telegraph office several times, but no dispatch came. She did not dine, but took tea about 6 p.m. She was an innocent looking young lady, dressed plainly, and spoke with an open candor about her affairs that allayed suspicion, though the impression prevailed that she was not exactly right in her mind. Her stories were somewhat contradictory. Her home was in Manlius, her husband was to meet her in Charlotte. She spoke of him as a man of wealth, yet her attire was not that of the wife of a rich man. She was plainly dressed. That there was something wrong those with whom she came in contact doubted not. A conversation took place last evening in which she stated that she desired to remain at the hotel until her husband arrived, when he would settle all debts. She was asked why she did not go home. No, she did not care to do that. The absent husband would surely come. He had said so. That was enough for her. It was deemed prudent to acquaint the authorities with the facts of the case, and about 10 o'clock last evening Sergeant McCormick appeared at Congress Hall, in response to a telephonic message. The case was stated to him by the clerk. He asked to see the young lady, and was shown into the parlor where she sat alone. A long conversation ensued, the officer putting his questions in such a manner as to lead the young lady to tell the story truthfully, and the young lady answered in a way that tended to keep the most important facts out of sight. Sergeant McCormick had had more experience than she, however, and it was at last learned that she had been enticed from home, betrayed, married and then deserted by some professional scoundrel for whom hanging would be an excellent punishment. Her name is Barbara F. Blank, her father, Lawrence Blank, living just outside of Manlius and owning a small farm. She worked as a domestic in the family of David Collins, at Fayetteville, Onondaga county. In the latter part of June she went to Syracuse, where she visited a friend named Shay, who has a place of business on Salina street. Mrs. Shay introduced her to one John Stile, who, the woman emphatically told her, was a wealthy man and wanted to get married. Stile acted the part of a gentleman finely. He told her she was a nice girl; that he had searched for one to wed but searched in vain, until he met her. She believed his simple stories. They were acquainted but a few days, when, on the night of July 1st, she, with him, visited a house or hotel on Salina street and were married. There was a certificate, but he carefully placed it away for safe keeping. "I don't think he ought to have it, though," she said, innocently, when the matter was referred to. He gave her a small diamond ring, which he took again and also a large sirocco ring, which she wears upon her left hand. Her parents, at Manlius, had heard of the intended marriage. They opposed it, and warned her not to wed the man. She thought she knew him too well. He would not deceive her. They went to several small towns about Syracuse, and then to Skaneateles. Early last week he drove away from there with a horse and buggy which he told his wife he had hired to see the country. They drove to Syracuse and, not stopping there, to Jordan. Then he drove the next day westward, and the following day through Rochester to Charlotte. There he placed the horse and buggy upon the boat and crossed to Canada. Then he went to Kingston, where he sold the horse and buggy. She is not sure it was Kingston. Saturday last he left her, stating that he had to go to Buffalo and telling her to go to Charlotte, where he would meet her. He gave her two dollars when he left. She has not seen him since. She came to Charlotte, but saw no Mr. Stile. Then she came to this city.

She says Stile belongs in Philadelphia and has plenty of property both there and in Allentown, Pa. Circumstances, however, induce those who know the case to believe that he is a professional horse thief, who has betrayed and ruined the girl. He is believed to be identical with a party who sold a stolen horse and buggy at Skaneateles, and then stole another there which he drove away. The descriptions in the two cases are the same. The man is also believed to be identical with one who perpetrated a similar outrage in the vicinity of Montpelier, Vt. In that case, as in this, a young girl was enticed from home. She was represented as a wife and in ill health. The man drove her out one day, sold the horse and buggy at another town, stole another there, sold that also and then deserted the young woman.

In that case he represented himself to be an agent of a Boston publishing house. In this he appears as a buyer of cattle. Miss Blank, or Mrs. Stile, was left at Congress Hall while Sergeant McCormick repaired to the telegraph office and sent a dispatch to her father, and one to the Chief of Police of Syracuse. A full description of the thief and betrayer is in possession of the police, and it is to be hoped that he will be captured and receive the punishment he so richly deserves.

From A Physician.

Gents you may perhaps remember that I wrote you several weeks ago in regard to the use of the PERUVIAN SYRUP for my wife, who was suffering from general debility, the sequence of Typhoid Dysentery. I had tried the most noted physicians in this State, and also in Canada, without relief. At your recommendation she commenced the use of the Syrup, the first four bottles made but little impression, but while taking the fifth she began to improve rapidly, and now, after using six of the dollar bottles, she has regained her strength, and is able to do most of the work around the house; and I feel that I cannot speak too highly in praise of the PERUVIAN SYRUP. I have prescribed it to several of my patients, and have procured the sale of several dozens of it here. You can make any use of this letter you see fit.
Yours very truly,
H. D. BELDEN, M.D.
