Sir Thomas Coutts' most wife, the grand-Lancashire peasant, who was a servant in the employment of the banker's brother until her marriage made her one of the first ladies of the kingdom. Baroness received her title in 1871. She received the freedom of the city of London in 1872, and eighteen months later the city of Edinburgh similarly honoured her. At the end of the last Russo-Turkish war the Sultan decorated her with the grand cordon of the order of Medidie in recognition of her service to the founded. The estimation in which she is keld by the people of England is shown by the fact that when, in 1868, the reform procession passed her house, and she was recognized at the window, a shout was raised, and for over two hours the air rang with the cries of the thousands who filled the etreets. In 1871 the fortune of the Baroness was estimated at £10,000,000, and up to this time she had given away for charitable purposes fully £5,000,000. In other words, after disposing of $25,000,7 000 for the education and care of her fellow-people, she still held fully $50,-000,000 in investment. She is the richest single woman in England, and her liberality in the distribution of her vast fortune has commended her to the admiration of the civilized world.
