CATARRH.
The Constitutional Remedy.

The Constitutional Catarrh Remedy is the first article placed before the public that proposed to cure Catarrh by building up the Constitution. It struck at the root of the whole difficulty, and thousands upon thousands of letters have been received by the proprietors, setting forth the marvelous cures, and what is remarkable, curing not only the Catarrh, but all other ailments at the same time. This is what it always does. The following statements are only samples of what we are constantly receiving, from well known people to whom you can write, and not bogus ones. Catarrh and its attendant evils, cold in head, hacking cough, incipient consumption, headache, pain in the back and loins, dizziness, languidness, loss of appetite and general weakness, all leave together when the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy is taken as recommended.
Home Testimony in favor of Littlefield's Catarrh Remedy:
T. J. B. HARDING, Esq.,
Brockville, 12th Feb., 1876.
My Dear Sir,—I can carefully endorse, from my own experience, the favorable account of the Constitutional Catarrh Remedy. It has afforded me relief from Catarrh and Cold every time I used it, and then when I could not take proper care of my self in bad weather.
Yours respectfully, C. W. VOLNEY.
T. J. B. Harding, Esq.:
Brockville, Feb. 9, 1872.—Sir: Having had Catarrh for a number of years, and having tried nearly all the remedies advertised that promised relief or cure, without the desired result. I came to the conclusion that it was useless in trying to cure the disease. I was advised last fall to give the "Constitutional Catarrh Remedy" a trial, and did so, with very little faith as to the result. But I am happy now to say, that after using three bottles, I am entirely cured and do not feel as if I ever had Catarrh. I also cheerfully recommend it to all those that suffer from that disease, and am satisfied that if they will only try one bottle, it will need no other recommend, and will convince the most sceptical.
Yours Respectfully,
JOHN C. BANN,
St. Lawrence Hall.

WITH THE TIDE.

Wave by wave o'er the sandy bar,
Up to the coast lights, glimmering wan,
Out of the darkness, deep and far,
Slowly the tide came creeping on.
Through the clamor of billowy strife
Another voice went wailing thin:
The first faint cry of a new-born life
Broke on the night—and the tide was in.

Wave by wave o'er the sandy bar,
Back again from the sleeping town,
Back to the darkness near and far,
Slowly the tide went drooping down.
Silence lay on the chamber death;
Silence lay on the land about;
The last low flutter of weary breath
Fell on the night—and the tide was out.

A Kiss to Take to Sea.

Give me a laughing, parting kiss,
That I afar may be
Blest in the thought you gave me this
To cheer me, lass, at sea.

To tropic climes I'll take this kiss;
In storms thought 'twill be
My dreams shall still be sweet with this,
This kiss I take to sea.

Smile, smile; your Ned will you much miss
You'll sometimes think of me;
And when shall I not feel this kiss,
This kiss I take to sea!

RETURNING PROSPERITY IN IRELAND.

No one who new revisits Ireland after an absence of some years can have any doubt that she has made a considerable advance in material prosperity, says the London Spetator. Evidence of the fact is borne in upon him in a multiplicity of ways. The prosperity is not such as this country enjoys, but of its kind it is real and considerable. It has been attained though terrible suffering that reflect discredit on our statesmanship and our intelligence but now that the suffering is past it is some consolation that it has not been undergone altogether in vain. The great emigration which followed the Famine has diminished competition in the land, has brought the population within the limits the wages fund can support, and in short has made the general condition tolerable.

If that were all, the prosperity would be unsubstantial indeed. In the middle of last century there was a famine as grievious as that of 47, and yet the beginning of the present century saw the population out growing the means of subsistence. If there were at present then no more than a reduction of numbers, we might well fear a repetition of the difficulties and sufferings of the period before the potato failure. But fortunately there is much more than a reduction of numbers, or rather, the reduction of numbers only makes room for the action of the favourable causes. Inefficient and defective as in many respects the national schools are they still have been at work for 40 years, not without producing good fruits.

Yet more powerful has been the influence of emigration. Thousands of people pass to and fro annually between Ireland, England, the United States and Australia. They bring to the knowledge of the stay-at-homes a new world, new state of society, new conditions altogether. All these things have dispelled the mists of insular prejudice and insular ignorance that hung over the land, and have swept with a fresh breeze the nooks and crannies of helpless apathy. Moreover, the vast multitudes that are settled beyond the Atlantic and in the South Pacific have made America and Australia sound like home to the Irishman. He is no longer resigned, therefore, to injustice or poverty. He knows that the world is wide. He stands upon his independance, and resolves to better himself if he thinks he is not treated well. Employers and landlords understand the feeling, and they do not presume as of old. Lastly the Land Act has improved immeasurably the position of the farmers.

PROSPECTS OF A EUROPEAN WAR.

If the latest dispatches from the East are to be credited, there is no longer any Servian war—it is now Russia against Turkey. For weeks Muscovite soldiers have been quietly marching into Servia and taking up positions in front of the Turkish lines. It is stated that 10,000 Russians of the regular army are in Servia, and are being reinforced by volunteers and cash sent from the Empire. Moscow seems to be the headquarters of this new movement, which is anything but reassuring either for the Porte, or for European peace. Still more unpropitious are the facts that Milan, evidently against that of his Ministry, has been proclaimed King, which means independence of Turkey; that the Servian officers have been deposed from chief command and replaced by Russians, and that the new troops have been taken in charge by a Russian General whose name has been concealed from the public. The Montenegrins, who have of late been apathetic, have been roused and are again taking up arms, while spies or a incendiaries are busy in Bosnia, Herzegovina and Bulgaria, endeavoring to keep alive the warlike spirit that seemed to have been crushed.

Proof on the futility of the late armistice, entered into half-heartedly by both parties, is ample from the facts that each charge the other with having broken its conditions and that, during the brief interval, each made preparations for an early resumption of hostilities. The truce expired last midnight, but all day yesterday both armies were in motion, and it was announced that the Turks would assume the offensive this morning. This conclusively shews that neither party to the armistice was honest. The Servians had their hopes raised by the Russians, the Turks were confident of the owning to their recent victories. As a consequence, both were anxious to resume the struggle. England's basis for peace, though agreed upon by all the other Powers, has fallen through because Russia is determined upon war. So says a Belgrade telegram. If this be true then the worst must come. There is good reason for believing the report to be true, for the conduct of Russia points in that direction and exactely opposite to her professions. And why are those professions made? Simply to hoodwink Europe until the proper moment arrives for declaring herself. Then she will be found in possession of a base of operations she could not have easily taken up under other circumstances, her armies will be on the ground and everything in readiness to move forward. The approaching winter will be of assistance too. All the indications point toward a terrible upheaval in Europe for which the Czar will be responsible. As Lord Beaconsfield stated, the situation is a very grave one. The ingenuity of the Cabinet must be severely taxed, for there is a crisis staring them in the face much the same as preceded the Crimean War. Russia is determined to get possession of the Dardanells. For this she has fought and intrigued times almost without number. It has for decades been her one great aim, her chief ambition. Two hundred years ago she began to covet the Crimea, then held by the Turks; fifty years later attacked it, and in 1783 won it. Since then she has coveted the Bosphorus, being the gateway to the Black Sea, which she virtually owns, it being the headquarter of her navy. In 1853 she took advantage of the trouble between the Turks and their vassals along the Danube, and her interference necessitated the armed remonstrence that resulted in the Crimean War. She was then defeated. In 1876 she has again taken advantage of a rebellion she fomented. Will another armed remonstrance be necessary? If so, will she be again beaten? To England this is an important question. But it must be answered, for Russia is determined to agitate and fight until she owns the covered Straits, or is finally checked. And the probabilities are that Russia will one day own them; no one knows how soon.—Hamilton Times.

A PIECE OF STRATEGY.

A bright little girl at one of the fashionable hotels recently surprised the waiter and guests at her table by hurrying in to dinner among the first, and in advance of her mother, and ordering ice cream, raisins, and other delicacies of the dessert before her soup and meats. The solution of her conduct appeared shortly, however, after the arrival of the mother, who watched with great solicitude the food taken by the child. It was "Baby, don't eat this," and "Baby, don't eat that," until dessert was reached, when baby order ice cream. Being cut down in her allowance by her mother, she took it with such unusual gusto that surprise was manifested, when she naively exclaimed, 'I took my dessert first to-day, mamma, so I should be sure and have enough.'

PARIS EXHIBITION.—Some doubts have been expressed in quarters as to the success of the proposed Universal Exhibition in Paris in 1878. The statement having been made that the German Government, amongst others, would take no part in it. It is now stated, however, that these doubts have been removed, and the German Government will not hold aloof. The Prince of Wales has signified his willingness to act as President of the Commission to help in the work.

WORSE AND WORSE.—It often happens when a person takes pills to correct the bowels that although they seem to do their work, still the after effect, of their griping and purging, is to cause a reaction, which leaves the bowels worse than before. Not so with WINGATE'S CATHARTIC PILLS, which are mild, yet effective, and never gripe, nor sicken.

CATARRH.
Cannot be cured by Snuffs, Washes, or Local applications. Thousands have been cured some of 40 years standing, by using the CONSTITUTIONAL CATARRH REMEDY. Certificates and treatise on Catarrh mailed to any address on application to T. J. B. HARDING, Brockville, Ont. Sold by all Druggists. Price—$1.00 per bottle.

A CARD.—To all who are suffering from the errors and indiscretions of youth, nervous weakness, early decay, loss of manhood, &c., I will send a receipt that will cure you, FREE OF CHARGE. This great remedy was discovered by a missionary in South America. Send a self-addressed envelope to the Rev. JOSEPH T. INMAN, Station D, Bible House, New York City.

☞ Twenty years experience in using Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers have proved them to be the most effectual remedy for coughs, and irritation of the throat, caused by cold, or unusual exertion of the vocal organs; public speakers and singers will find them most beneficial. The entire freedom from all deleterious ingredients renders "Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers," are thoroughly adapted to remove speedily all coughs and colds and are equally effective in the primary stages of consumption, asthma and bronchitis. Sold by all druggists and country dealers. Price 25c per box.

How to Make Money.—A horse dealer residing in the vicinity of New York market, purchases "Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy," by the dozen and feeds it to his horses; he says it is superior to anything that he has ever used as a condition medicine, that the horses are so much improved by its use as to sell more readily and command higher prices. Two other horse dealers, one residing at Huntingdon, the other at Glen Cove, L.I., also purchase it by the dozen and for the same purpose; these men, as well as many others similarly engaged, know too well the value and importance of this medicine ever to be without it. Remember the name and see that the signature of A. & Co. is on each package. Northrop & Lyman, Toronto, Ont., proprietors Sold by all medicine dealers.
