Before the crew of the Invader left for Chicago, they received telegrams from the Rochester yachtsmen wishing them success in their mission, and when victory was assured they were the first to send along congratulations.

An all-Canada rugby team to make a tour of England, Scotland and Ireland is the latest scheme in the football world, and one, too, which there is every hope of being carried through with success. The idea originated with Dr. A. Clifford Jack, quarterback of the Montreal team. As the rugby district is limited, the bulk of the players will be from Hamilton, Toronto, Kingston, Brockville, Ottawa and Montreal. The twenty men once picked, would meet in Montreal. They should previously have received a copy of the rules of the English game to study up, and when they me there should know them fairly well. Having all played the 1902 season fixtures, they would be in good condition, and only a couple of weeks here would be necessary to perfect them in the English game.
