An aged, well dressed man with white side whiskers and a general appearance. of substantial prosperity and eminent respectability stepped into the retail store Fifth avenue of a book publisher the other day and asked one of the young clerks in a confidential undertone: "Have you a match?"

"Certainly, sir," replied the young man, producing a handful of Incifers from his ve t pocket, "but you will permit me to say that it is against the rules to smoke

"Oh, that's all right," replied the old gentleman amiably. "I never smoke." With that he began to fumble in his pockets. Not finding what he wanted, he asked the clerk for the loan of a knife. Then he lit the match, blew it out immediately and began to sharpen the burned

"Perhaps," he said, "you have a quiet place where I could sit down for a few moments without being observed?" The clerk, wondering what the old gentleman might ask for next, politely led the way to a corner of the store fitted with easy chairs for the benefit of such patrons of the firm as might want to glance over a book before buying it. The old gentleman sat down and without a moment's hesitation rolled up the left leg of his trousers to a point above the knee, Then, using the back of the knife as a hammer, with a few well directed blows

"I am very much obliged to you. You see, I have a wooden leg, and one of the pins holding it together fell out. The match will do very nicely until I can get home. If you should happen to be over in -- and have anything the matter with your leg, just step into my office, and I shall be glad to assist you."

Then, as he handed the clerk his card, he smiled, bowed politely and walked out.
