Sir Richard Cartwright was present. and by invitation addressed the meet ing ably for half an hour. He did not for prudential reasons, broach upon the opposition policy of the session, friends are expected. D. Rielly, leader. spoke of the general position and pres pects of the Reform party. He pointed out how signally his prophecies of two years before, in that very room, been fulfilled by recent events, how that Mr. Mackenzie and his colleagues had triumphed in the investigations into the working of their departments. while their opponents had been found guilty of the very acts falsely charged against the late ministry. Time proving his words true, that References of Kingston would have no reason to feel ashame l of Government they had so loyally ported. He (Sir Richard) would few hours leave in company with the city m miber for Ottawa to do his dut to the country. There would be no show of factions opposition to the Goverament policy, but the Opposition would, on the other hand, use their talents in the direction of an improve ment of the legislation upon the en grossing sudject of the hour in such way that the measure shall be least burtful to the country. The organizaberents of Queen St. Church are fully tion visible in the Association be warm warmly applanded. Several times during his address the enthusiasm was manifested, and at its conclusion hearty cheers with vigorous "tigers," (such as that hall never heard except during the ratification meeting of Mr. Gunn) were given for Sir Richard and the city member. A vote of thanks was also passed to the former, in again adding to the number of addresses before the Reformers of Kingston, whose call be has never dishonored. After several new members had been admitted to the Association the annual election of officers took place unani-

The Executive Committee of last year was elected with one exception Mr. Isaac Newland's name being substituted for Mr. R. Tandy's, he having left the city. PRESENTATION OF PRIZES.

Yesterday afternoon an athletic com ctition was given at the Tote dn Po Barracks by a squad of Cadets from the Royal Military College. The drill shed was filled with spectators, a large proportion of whom were ladies. The dressed. The following composed the team : Sergts. H.M. Campbell (in con cadets were drawn up in line, uniformly mand), O. Duff and E. Hubbell; Lance Corporals Z. Wood, E. Wurth, F. An derson, J. Lang and H. Greenwood Corporals A. Hodgins, F. Skinner, F. Latimer, C. Duffin and A. Kirkpatrick; Cadeta R. Leonard, A. Joly, A. Luidlaw, A. Tomlinson, A. Hooper, M. Neyland and J. Hisketh. The competition was confined to the shifting of ordinance, open to all Garr son Batteries in the Dominion. While the cadets had little hope of obtaining the prize they desired to show what they could do, as a result of the instruction given them at the college. The gun to be handled weighed 5,800 lbs At a word of command the cadet sprang to their places, dismounted the gun, turned the carriage and mounted the gun again quickly. When the time was announced the spectators rapturously applauded the performers. The time was remarkable, being only a fow seconds longer than that in which "B" Battery had achieved similar results. Had the gun, however, been fired there would have been very little differ once. At the close of the exhibition Lient Col. Strange, Commandant of them highly upon their success in the

very pleasant way. He complimented

PRESENTATION OF PRIZES, It had been arranged that after the competition the prizes recently won by the cadets at their shooting contest should be awarded. The first, a beautiful field glass, given for competition by the Dominion Artillery Associa tion, was awarded to Corporal A. Hod gins, of Toronto, who scored 52 points probably the highest that will be made this year. Lieut. Col. Strange, in prosenting the glass to Corpl. Hodgins trusted that he would use it in scanning the enemies of the country, and that he would handle his gun in the battle field with as much skill as he had in the competition. The Corporal saluted his superior officer, returned his thanks and

Lance Corporal H. W. Osborne was next called forward and received the accord prize, having made a score of 46. His present was one given by Lieut. Col. Strange, also a field glass. The officer making the presentation addressel Osborne as he did the first prize-

ACKNOWLEDGING MERIT. The Commandant of the Battery now a kiressed the officers and gunners of the Royal School of Gunnery. Next to receiving rewards from the hands of Her Majesty, for deeds of valor performed upon the field of battle, was, he said, the honor of receiving prizes for their skill with arms. This year the honors were divided between the two Schools of Gunnery, "A" Battery taking the place this evening in Cataraqui Masonie prizes for shifting ordnauce, and "B" Battery those for target shooting. Co Montizambert was called forward and presented, on behalf of the Dominion Artillery Association, with a magnificent field glass, elegantly mounted, for Battery School of Gunnery. Colonel Strange enlogized the Colonel for the success that the School had attained to under his command. It was unnecessary to further compliment him, for

> made by the Colonel himself, was proof enough of his efficiency. Several gunners were presented with budges and purses for the scores made

Sergt. Major Lavie was also referred to in a flattering way. The Lieut. Colonel advanced the idea that the harmony prevailing among, and tone of the non-commissioned officers was attributable to the Sergt. Major, and that this intimation was concurred in was evident by the applause. The last presentations made were those of badges to the drivers who kept their harness and equipage in the best condition. Four drivers were deemed worthy of recognition. As two of them, however, received prizes last year, it was thought expedient that Drivers Freeman and Demers should receive the badges this year.

AFTER ENTERTAINMENT. Part of the company then adjourned o the officers' mess room, where refreshments were served and a few hours' spent in the many dance. Altogether a pleasant afternoon was spent.

Late Libentrunnt Menn. The London Times of a recent date entains a communication from T. Rice Henn, in reference to the battle of Kushk i Na khud, and the death of the callant Irish officer, Lieut. Henn, R.E., son of a cousin of the Dean of Ontario Lieut. Honn was acting Brigade Major of the Candahar force, and was in command of a half company of Sappers who fought until utterly annihilated. Heun behaved in the most gallant manner, as the despatches state. When his follow ers were reduced to a very few number. only some ten or twelve, he and those who remained placed themselves back to back and fought it out to the very hat with Ayoob's overwhelming numbers. The Bombay Gazette says: "Montion of such officers as Major Blackwood A Goop Percuase.-Mr. Ed. O'Rielly, and Lieut. Henn should find a place in a lawyer in Tonawanda. "SOCIETY UNMASSED." Gist of a Lecture Belivered in the Ball by Mr. J. B. Watson.

A small audience assembled in City Hall last exercises trabuar Mr. J. B. Watson lecture. He was fovourably introduced by Mr. J. H. Metcalfe, M P.P., and he seems to have pleased eriptive speaker and A figurative considerable ability. The programme was opened by two pieces of music, an instrumental duct by Mrs. Mavety and Miss Purely, fairly performed, and a song by Mr. Purdy, assisted in the chorus by the ladies. Mr. Watson facetionsly observed that he rarely addressed so intelligent, sympathetic, on thusiastic and demonstrative an ardience of empty benches. It was an old saying and a true one, "Every mar to his trade." Whether he was a public speaker remained to be seen, but yet the public seemed to have considered that he was not when the atten dance was so slim. He was, however by nature, partly Irish, partly Scotch and partly Canadian, and his little of the former was of Cork extraction, so that they were not going to float him ont of the city without hearing him be fore a full house if he had to appear not once but thirteen times in order to secure that end. The lecture was on "Society Unmasked." It would be observed that there are many FORRLES OF MODERN SOCIETY that will not bear treatment with ungloved hands. The lecturer first con sidered the erroneous idea which prevailed in recard to amusements, which more than anything else caused differences of opinion and brought the keen lash of criticism to bear upon the who trifled with the conclusions of some in regard thereto. In every town and city there is a class of young men who must have society, and if they cannot mingle with that of a higher order they will descend to the lower. Almost everywhere four things are disapproved of by the Christian people - dancing, billiards, cards and the theatre. He did not appear as the champion of any of these things, as conducted at the present time, but he felt and said that some of the substi tutes for them were as objectionable as they were. All the practices to which he had alluded were offensive, princi pally because of their evil associations, but under favourable conditions all were a source of genuine pleasure and amusement. Dancing at home or else where, free from contaminating and ininrious influences, made one graceful and was certainly more elevating than the games to which even ing parties resorted for pastime. Billiards and bowling alleys were demor alizing under certain circumstances but not under the protection of the Mechanica' Institute or some other useful association, and certainly required more skill and proved more interesting than croquet playing to which billiards bore a close resemblance. To engage in WHEST OR RUCHER vas more entertaining than to play out not so differently manipulated. for the theatre it should not be harshly judged, and dramatics should not cause so many to raise their hands in holy horror, especially when at home a play well read or acted imported knowledge which could not be conveyed so well any other way. Reference was to the nature of elecution, and to Punsheon's eminence in this respect, being even the peer of such men as Booth. Barrett, Forest and Adams. Mr. Puncheon's success did not consist so much in his great originality as in his terse. pithy sentences and burning eloquence. Spurgeon was similarly noted. and any one who has seen Talmage and heard him preach will be impressed with his style, as he not only drives the nails fairly home but rivets them at the same time. The lecturer passed on to notice the causes of domestic hapsiness and unhappiness. It was no wonder some children wanted to leave their homes, so little is the attention paid to what will interest and elevate them. Those who made home so at tractive that there was really no place like it were rare; and when he found such a person, as he did in the person of farmer near St. Thomas not long since. he felt that he fully understood the theory of life, and that his genius was equal to that of a Napoleon or a Caesar. Mr. Rathbun, of Mill Point, was referred to as one who understood

THE RELATIONS OF BOCIETY, and his manner was agreeable and such as to produce harmony between master and employer. Were his nature otherwise it would act as frost on flowers. killing all with which it came in con tact. There were some who were con stantly discontented, and their presence suggested the statement that those who continually found fault with the actions of others invariably had some weak point in his heart or some defect in his head. There are none in this world. who at some time in their lives, have not a need of sympathy. So long as they have money they will have many to surcount them, but the moment adversity comes and they are wanted, like shadows they seem to take wings and fly away All men were not ungrateful, however. John B. Gough never forgot the kindsess of one Stratton, who, in his early and dissipated life picked him up, took him home, clothed him, and virtually made him what he is. He was Stratton's friend in life, and after his death se showed his sympathy in a practical manner, having helped the widow and minister in Indianapolis, and a second a society was its innumerable grades. He leavening it. He pictured the position of Canada in so far as its agricultural its mineral, mechanical skill and artis tic merit were concerned, and in conclu sion argued that unity was wanted to develope the country and make it prosperous. At times the lecturer was quite funny and at other times pathetic He has the knack of telling a good story well, has a perfect cor the Irish, Scotch and Dutch accents
