Some Warm Items From a Decidedly Torrid Town,

Some six weeks ago we announced that Jim Murdock, formerly of this gulch, had been neatly and thoroughly hanged by a vigilance committee in New Mexico, and that we were glad of it. Three days ago James walked in on us to say that our article had hurt his feelings.

As he explains it, he was hung all right enough, but after the crowd had departed the rope broke, and in the course of a day or two he got his breath back. While we do not feel that we owe him any apology, we will express the hope that he has profited by his lesson. The ropes used here never break.

We have known Major Bob Wharton him that he didn't boast of the lightning way he could pull a gun. Yesterday he got into trouble with a stage driver and had an opportunity to beat electricity all hollow. He knew what was coming, and yet before he had his hand on his gun the driver had him covered and was making him eat dirt. To cap the climax, the major's revolver hadn't a cartridge in it when it was taken from his pocket. Why certain people in this town don't carry clubs instead of guns is something we can't make out.

Last week, when we undertook to convince the Blue Front drug store that advertising always pays, Mr. Sheridan started to draw his gun on us. Four seconds later the muzzle of our pistol touched his nose. He came down gracefully. In this issue will be found his two column ad., and our readers are advised to go to him for anything wanted in his line. Aside from being a little impetuous, Mr. Sheridan is a tiptop fellow and an M. QUAD. honor to the town.

His Question Inopportune, "Will you marry me?" he asked.

She looked at him reproachfully. "Here am I, going away for the summer," she said: "going to the seashore "nd the mountains, and you would ask me to tje myself up at the beginning. I shall be glad to become engaged to you upon my return, but-did you ever see an engaged girl at a summer resort with her fiance back in the city? You shouldn't ask too great a sacrifice."

Another Exaggeration. "How is your husband that was run over be the shtrate car yistherdy mornin, Mrs. McGinnis?"
