Napance, where he will inspect the welcome visitors to the city. The ball was held in the city buildings, the city hall being for dancing and Ontario hall for refreshments. The form er was made bright by bunting, streamers of which were hung from the ceiling to the walls. The platform was very cosily arranged as a sitting-out place. In front of the platform gleamed an engine headlight. Dancing commenced about nine o'clock, music being furnished by Crosby & Thornton's orchestra. The visitors were joined by fully three hundred city folks, who greeted their rural brothers and sisters very heartily. All joined in the all-night hop which did not cease until daylight appeared. Even then the dancers were loth to leave the canvas, but the musicians were too tired to hold out any longer.
