These intelligent men become expert judges of human nature, and if they had to the nearest drug store for a the sentencing of criminals would revolutionize the accepted code. In conversation with one of them Friday evening much light was thrown upon convict Said he: "I have been here now for apwards of fifteen years and have come into daily contact with all kinds and conditions of criminals, from the heartless murderer down to the thoughtles boy who shouldn't be in a penal institution. My opinion is that judges make grave mistakes in pronouncing long term sentences; five years should be the maximum for ordinary offences, with a longer sentence for repeaters. The object of sending men here, if I understand the matter rightly, is to reclaim them society and make them good citizens again, as well as punishing them in my opinion more good citizens are spoiled than are reclaimed by sentences fore they had come to look upon their the average convict is away from the influence of society, the more difficult it is for hims to get back into the ruts honesty again and be able to make an honest living.
