Profitable Expenditures. Sir Richard Cartwright speaking at foronto, said. We might have taken no steps to promite immigration. We might have taken no steps to develop British Columbia. We might have taken no steps to extend Intercolonial railway-we might herve left its terminus in a ploughed field as we found it. We might have given you no penny post. We might have taken ten years to finish your canals instead of completing them in three. We might have done all those things, and possibly we might red thousand dollars on your ennual expenditure. But had we done so your annual income would have been many millions less than it is to day. Had we done so, the wealth of the people of Canada would have been less by tens and tens of mulso, the population of Canada would have been less by several hundreds of thousands than it is to-day.
