GRATITUDE A VIRTUE.

The Spectator has gone off again into silly hysterics. It declares that the Whig is willing to sacrifice the good name of Canada, to insult Britain, and extend sympathy to the enemies of the empire, that Kingston may get a few thousand dollars worth of public works from Hon. J. I. Tarte. The screamers are getting more excited all the while, as their rank political game is playing out. The Whig is safe enough on a long record on public and loyal grounds; it can also call down its own party in the way the Spectator cannot, because of gross prejudice, or will not for lack of courage. But it pleads guilty to an especial regard for the friends of Kingston.

Every other town takes a fling at this city and its own people have rarely the spirit to resent this. Only the other day an attack of a Kingston conservative paper sent to the Montreal Star a grossly untrue report regarding the city in order to get a fling at the liberals on "the growing time." The harm done Kingston was incalculable, but the Star welcomed the attack, gave it a spicy heading, "Kingston in a Bad Light," and reserved a first page place for it. This Montreal journal is literally "run" by conservative organizer Dalby, Sir Charles Tupper's lieutenant. The paper refused to insert the board of trade's reply to the slanders, and the liberal journals of Montreal, the Herald and Witness, had to be appealed to for space. Is it any wonder Kingston appreciates public men who are friendly when it has the conservative element against its property. Ingratitude is the essence of all sin, and the burning of the effigy was doubly offensive on that account. The Spectator will not be pleased to learn, however, that the student alumnus society on Saturday night took measures to repudiate the action which that paper lauded so highly.

BIDDING HARDY FAREWELL.
When Hon. Mr. Hardy was in office, as a member of the government of Ontario, he was a very bad man. He was the "wicked partner" of Sir Oliver Mowat during the many years that that gentleman guided the destinies of the province, and he was the representation of the wicked one himself when he became premier of Ontario.

But now that he has retired from public life it is discovered that Mr. Hardy is a man of amiable parts, of high mind and noble thoughts, the one individual who was soft and purring in his moods, who crossed the house, whispered his love into the ear of Mr. Whitney, and by his pure benevolence prevented the leader of the opposition and his hosts from rising up and wiping out the government.

Mr. Hardy, it is true, said some sharp things at times. Metaphorically speaking he reached for the bad boys on the cross benches, laid them across his knee and spanked them, and they felt very sore about it. Still they accepted all this in good part, as the necessary discipline which a kind parent administers to his erring children.

It is so pleasant to realize all this now, to understand that the appetites of public life are not what they seem, that the politicians are not the hateful things we sometimes read about. Mr. Whitney, bidding Mr. Hardy farewell, at his Toronto meeting, was profuse and pathetic in his praise. Mr. Hardy disappears from view amid the tears of his opponents.

And with him goes liberal government in Ontario. That is Mr. Whitney's announcement. The withdrawal of the old leader, the Tory organ declares, "is the beginning of the end." Which is another way of saying that the present season has arrived.

For a good many years the government has been going, and is likely to keep on going. And "after all," as the Mail remarks, "the successful working of our constitution demands that governments shall come and go as the people desire." And for over a quarter of a century it has been their desire to keep the liberals in office.

THE TRANSVAAL OUTRAGES.
"The Transvaal From Within," a book by J. P. Fitzpatrick, London, is a valuable contribution at the right moment. He is a South African by birth, who has lived for fifteen years in the Boers' country, been secretary of the reform committee, with personal and public knowledge of men and actions. He with great fairness narrates the founding of the Great Nk, the inability of the Boers to hold their own, their appeal to the British, with annexation as the result. The Boers generally favored this annexation; the Kaffirs were harassing them off their lands, the Zulus were threatening, and there was not a dollar in the public treasury.

The Transvaal was annexed in 1871. The president and nearly all members of the government, as well as the newspapers and body of the people desired this strength and protection. One small party opposed, and to conciliate them president Burgers formally dissented, but secretly approved.

With annexation commerce had a boom; the public debts were paid; and the power of the Transvaal's enemies broken. The Zulu war, costing $30,000,000, was undertaken, but the Boers, thus relieved of troubles, were ungrateful and treacherous; agitation for repeal at once began. It ended in the slaughter on Mejsaba hill, after the treasury of Brookbush Spruit, the murders of Capt. Elliott, Dr. Barbour and

THE WHIG—661

Mr. Green, the public flinging of an Englishman and frequent violations of the honor of the white flag. With the convention of 1881 a new history began, with the antagonism of British and Boer feeling. President Kruger is the head and front of the hatred to Great Britain; he is not forced by any party, but forces his people; the other leaders are but clever tools. He has declared that the Uitlanders would get their rights only over his dead body.

From 40,000 people in the Transvaal in twenty years numbers have reached 300,000 chiefly through Uitlander immigration. The revenue has risen from $465,000 to $20,000,000, chiefly through Uitlander industry. Yet the Uitlanders have been more and more rigidly excluded from voice in the government. In 1882 Kruger was elected president; then an alien was admitted to bargain rights for a residence of one year; immediately the franchise qualification was raised to five years, and successive franchise laws have increased the obstacles till it became an impossibility for an Uitlander even to vote, much less to have a voice in spending his own taxes. No community of 300,000 could require a revenue tax of $20,000,000 a year; money was scandalously wasted; extravagant salaries paid, till the list from $255,000 has risen to $6,000,000 or twenty five times as great, over five times the total revenue in 1876. The salary list is sufficient to pay $200 per head to every male Boer. Against such robbery protest was in vain. But for the careful details given in the book the villainy would be incredible.

President Kruger's aim to re-annex South Africa, and his movements in that direction precipitated the raid of 1896 of the British of force, heavy importation of war munitions, restriction of English education, and suppression of public speech, were all protested against. The failure of the raid filled Kruger's coffers, gave him European sympathy, made him paramount at home, and helped his military preparations. The design to drive England from the continent is proved beyond measure and on the 12th of this October Kruger started out to do it, forcing the war.

EDITORIAL NOTES.
A soap manufacturer of England is now credited with a desire to build a boat that will sail for the America's cup next year. And it will not be made of soap, either.

Coal has gone up, on the American side another fifty cents a ton. The mines are in the hands of a huge monopoly, and they can charge practically what they like for the supplies.

Mr. Whitney to Hon. Mr. Hardy—I wish you happiness, comfort, peace, prosperity and length of days.
Hon. Mr. Hardy to Mr. Whitney—The same to you.

Hon. Mr. Hardy will enjoy in his new office—the surrogate's of York county—the praises of the Tory party. No one ever dreamt that he was their idol, and that only his occupation of a political office kept them from falling down and worshipping him.

The Stratford Times suggests that the editor of the Brockville Times, being very bold thirty, enrol for service in the Transvaal. Vain thought. The Times' man is too busy fighting phantoms right at home. He is slaying the liberals every day—in his mind.

When the Whig said the conservatives were great fighters—with their tongues—it had reference to those, who, over the Transvaal question, were stirring up racial hatred and doing their best to cause a racial war. These people are great fighters, but they are not going to the front.

The Brockville Times does the Whig an injustice by saying that it esteems the conservative soldier boys as cowards. Nothing of the kind ever occurred to the Whig. Those who go to the front are worthy, all of them, of the esteem to which they are held. There is not a coward among them.

How many of the conservative editors, who are frantic in their loyalty, have volunteered to go to the Transvaal? A number of these great fighters are in the militia, too. Artemus Ward was willing to sacrifice his last wife's relation for the cause of the union in the great conflict, but these Tory fighters on paper do not offer even so much. They are screamers only.

A paper which continually misrepresents another, as does the Brockville Times, should not discuss bravery. The man of courage is a fair fighter, and of such character is the journal he creates. The Whig insults nobody and the public know this, since it has a more general support from both parties than will ever be the privilege of the Brockville paper. The latter is troubled with Whig on the brain.

The selection of Cadet Maclean from the military college, for a commission in the Transvaal contingent, is another proof of the political pall which is rapidly subordinating merit in that institution, which is so much reformed otherwise. He was fourth in his class at the end of the first year, and twelfth at the end of his second year, and it could not be on account of his college record that he was preferred.

The city council is to be highly commended for its grant of $25 to each of the Transvaal volunteers from this city. It has touched the well springs of public sympathy for deserving courage and loyalty. These soldiers are going out upon a fighting expedition which may not end in South Africa. The plotting of Russia and France is ominous of trouble, and Great Britain may be involved in a great war. In such case the Canadian regiments will see a long and trying service. All honor to the brave fellows!

When Queen's college students are burning effigies of alleged disloyal people does it ever occur to them there are at the head of the institution men who procured $180,000 from the citizens of Kingston on the plea of establishing the university here permanently, and who have deliberately started an agitation for removal to Ottawa? That is what was done from within the college corporation there is abundant proof. The chancellor approved of it; the principal did not, but the talk went on.

News From Amherst Island

ETHEL, Oct. 23.—All the steam threshers have finished work for the season except Glen & Co's. Ploughing is now the order of the day. Mr. Fisher, Portmouth, loaded barley on the sloop Idlewild here last week. Byron Robinson, representing Sylvester Bros., was at Stella last week.

Miss Mabel Chown has entered the general hospital at Kingston as a nurse in training. Mrs. Chown has returned from Wolfe Island. Miss Maggie Hill has returned from a trip to Chicago and the west. George Glen is dangerously ill. S. K. Lugwell is ill with appendicitis. Prof. Eaton was at Stella this week. Frederick Garvin, the new leader of the brass band is having success. Those who predicted a short time ago that the band would soon be something of the past, have argued for themselves the name of "false prophets."

A decided improvement is noticed in the quality of the music the boys render us now. The Orangemen will celebrate the gunpowder plot on Saturday evening, November 4th. Rev. James Camberland, B.A., will deliver to them a lecture in Victoria hall. The Protestant Boys will not give their annual fancy ball this year. Mrs. John Hump, Emerald, dangerously ill of blood poisoning, is recovering under the skillful treatment of Dr. Northmore. Mr. R. Wilson, jr., ill for some time, improves slowly. John McVey, jr., is doing a good business in buying apples and barrel making. J. S. Noisom, wife and family, are visiting at Lyndhurst. The abundance of grain on the island and good prices is making the residents happy and business good.

A GOOD POINT ABOUT OUR

Furniture Coverings.

If there is one thing above another that the Kingston Carpet Warehouse is noted for it is the reliability and worth of its furniture coverings. We have a room for shoddy things; the kind that gives trouble to the purchaser. Our Furniture Coverings embody every good point that could be wished for. In design they are artistic and up-to-date, and in quality unsurpassed. Handsome cost a little more than the shoddy thing, but are cheaper in the end. We are showing New Furniture Coverings in Windsor Tapestries, Silk Tapestries, Silk Brocade, Cotton Brocade, Mercerised Tapestries, Mohair Plushes, Silk Plushes, Wool Plushes, Silk Velours, Cotton Velours, Brocaded Plushes, Brocaded Genoa Velvets, Repps in Crimson shades for church work, Gute Damasks, Cotton Damasks, etc., Furniture Fringes, Trimpes, Cords and Buttons to match. Our prices, considering quality, are surprisingly low and it will pay you to investigate them. Our Upholstering Department is in charge of a first-class man and we guarantee our work to be first-class in every particular. We are making a special inducement in a Tapestry Covering, beautiful in color, texture and design for the low price of 75c a yard.
