COALITION OF GRIT AND TORY.

POLITICIANS UNITE ON THE

Souvenir Range

It is not often political parties find common ground on which to meet. Their differences are mostly rich in discord. But we have an exception in the case of the celebrated Souvenir Range. Laurier and Tupper, Hardy and Whitney are of one mind on this subject.

"And now Hardy, Tupper, and Laurier too,
Use the Souvenir Range for political stew;
All gases escape through its fine aeration;
And good wholesome food now blesses the nation."

The strong point of the Souvenir stove is its aerated oven which makes cooking a success under any circumstance; and the good nature of the politician-as-well as the cook-is soon restored when a Souvenir stove is installed in the kitchen.

A neat Booklet entitled, "Kitchen Wisdom," with illustrations by J. W. Rengough and J. S. Gordon, is yours for the asking, and it tells you a great deal about the Aerated Oven.

BROADBRIM'S LETTER.

Somebody Is Looking For a Fight.

THE MUTUAL GOOD-FEELING

EXISTING BETWEEN THE UNITED STATES AND CANADA.

A Tribute to the Work of Rev D. L. Moody.—The New Horse Show a Splendidly successful—The Harvest of Grace.

(Social Correspondence, Letter No. 175)

New York, Nov. 24.—Looking over my exchanges I found from Canada a paper directed to me. In it was a leading article, several parts of which were marked with that admirable assistance to an editor's table, a blue pencil. Why he has selected me for that honor is a mystery, for there was nothing in the article that has anything in common between me and the writer, on any question under the sun, but the general trend of the article left the impression that it was written by a person spelling for a fight, and it occurred to me if he only kept on as he began, he need not go far before he is accommodated.

He did not mention the paper's name as it is not material to the master and I am not doing any free advertising at present—my specialty is news. The writer seems to labor under the impression that the people of the United States had nothing to do but abuse Canadians. The time selected was before the reception of Admiral Dewey, when there was a possibility of a Scotch regiment then in Canada accepting the invitation of the reception committee to visit New York that interesting occasion. The possibility of such an event awoke the writer to such a degree of wrath that he seemed to be threatened with spontaneous combustion.

A few lines further on reference was made to England's call on Canada for soldiers to send to South Africa against the Boers. Another explosion of bottled wrath when in fury he turns on the Yankees, and abuses them for their hatred of Canadians.

The town was startled by the report that evangelist Moody had received a warning from above that his work on earth must cease—not all perhaps, but enough to bring that mighty soul, which for thirty years and more had labored incessantly for the salvation of his fellowmen. I look back years ago to see the strong man just heard the voice of God. He had travelled several years preaching "Peace on Earth and Good Will to Men." Thousands followed him wherever he went, and he gave his promise of blessing and peace to those who believed in the New Evangelist. He passed by the side with his collar of rare and costly jewels and gold, and took by the hand, the ranged beggar in the street and told him of the life to come, and he was saved, and he, too, became an evangelist and led thousands to the righteous way, singing as did the prophet of old, and every day was a Pentecost. But a mighty voice was heard from across the water. "Come home! Come home we need thee every hour" and he came, and thousands visited the little cabin he arrived and beside him was Brother Sankey, the sweet singer of Israel, and as if inspired by the surroundings, that vast multitude sang, "Hold the Fort, for I Am Coming" and the heavens rang with the sacred harmony as it seldom did before. Perhaps while I write he has received the message "Son thy work on earth is finished. Thou art wanted on the other side of the river. Come, son, come."

of any other people since the world began.

We look abroad and good fortune has blessed the farmers' toil with a prosperity not known for many years, and the rich harvest remains ungathered in the field for want of laborers to profit by God's bounty.

War rages in every portion of the earth. Millions of men are yet with the pale of our immediate civilization. No warlike sound disturbs the harmony or peace. For this Almighty God be thanked!

But even while our eyes are bent upon the chances of failure or success we must not forget that there are other parts of the world which claim our attention. Here in New York we are busy with one of the most magnificent horse shows that the city has ever known. Both in quality and in numbers this exhibition has increased its popularity every year. Beauty, fashion and wealth are the horse shows' main qualifications. The jockey and the gambler are now relegated to a back seat; their opinions are never asked, but the examinations are now frequently passed on by the most beautiful and wealthy ladies in the association. It is no longer considered indecent for the beautiful Mrs. M. or the lovely Miss J. to stand beside the Bucephelus and proclaim his virtues and his worth. The question is often asked why our most fashionable belles and our golden youths should have taken a special charge of this one particular aristocratic show. It may seem strange to you that this should be the case, but the elucidation of this riddle is very simple here, beyond any other exhibit of the year is found the real, genuine, old, blue blood, in which fashion and beauty so much delight. Here are ladies whose ancestors, thousands of years ago, were the pride and boast of the Assyrian monarchs who swept over these magnificent highways in their chariots of gold.

Our Lady!

Quebec, Oct. 30th, 1899.

Our lads go forth like knights of old.

To arid plains, over surging sea,

Led by no lust of hirding gold,

But love of sacred liberty.

Our seafaring mother isle, from far,

Surrounds her children scattered wide;

They spring as wakes the note of war!

To fight for freedom at her side!

They hasten to her call,

To battle, in our name!

Resound the loud acclain,

God shield them, one and all!

We follow on, with thought and prayer,

In the rich freighted vessel's wake,

Through northern chill, through tropic air,

Oh, winds! blow softly for her!

She bears the hopes of hearts that bleed,

With parting pangs, with aching fears,

Oh, hear our Canada's "Gospedd!"

Then who must lead, while Duty steers?

They go at duty's call,

To battle, in our name!

Resound the loud acclain,

God guard them, one and all!

We follow on, with thought and prayer,

In the rich freighted vessel's wake,

Through northern chill, through tropic air,

Oh, winds! blow softly for her!

She bears the hopes of hearts that bleed,

With parting pangs, with aching fears,

Oh, hear our Canada's "Gospedd!"

Then who must lead, while Duty steers?

They go at duty's call,

To battle, in our name!

Resound the loud acclain,

God guard them, one and all!

What peaceful years ensued to do,

Crisis and sorrow swift complete,

Star our wide empire through and through,

Till, with one throb, her pulses beat!

From pin-crowned hell and sun-baked strand,

From queen and peasant, cot and hall,

One yearning breathes from land to land,

United guard our warriors, one and all!

They go at Britain's call,

To battle, in our name!

Resound the loud acclain,

God shield them, one and all!

Oh, God of battles, truth and right,

Whose hand can gods, through basion's might,

To day's victory as Thou west best,

My life to hate, till slumber cease,

Slay sword in sheath and lance in rest,

And bring our wanderers home in peace.

They go at Britain's call,

To battle, in our name!

Resound the loud acclain,

God guard them, one and all!

Tears.

John Innes, Toronto.

Tears are the outflow of great joy or grief,

The speechless language of a swelling heart,

Whose fitful solace is a sure relief.

For joys excessive, or affliction's smart;

The valve-escape of a pent-up soul.

whose fulness finds expression in a tear;

Which like healing balm, makes the wounded whole;

Or dearest friend—when darkest hour is near—

Whose hands we clasp in friendship's sacred hold,

And cling to them like ivy round the tree—

Weakness and strength combined in love's enfold,—

Then let the flood-gates open full and free!

Our bitter tears but give us strength to bear,

Affliction sore, or joy's too sudden glare.
