Medical Men. An officer in a local corps has received a letter from a brother officer at present spationed at Aldershot, Eng., and the writer gives a little information touching the depletion of all the big military bar racks in England of their brave occupants. He dwells more particularly up. on the need of the British aimy in South Africa of surgeons and trained assistants All the available army surgeons and hospital orderlies in England have been gathered up and sent to the front and still the supply is far short of the actual needs. The writer instances a case which shows she extremity to which the army medical department in England is at present reduced. Upwards of 200 Exery Smoker know soldiers from South Africa arrived at Aldershot for treatment and there was a dearth of surgeons to attend them.
