THE LATE ANTHONY M'GUIRE

Well Known Oltizon Passes Away After Short Illness.

After a short illness Authory McGuire, Queen street, passed away last evening in his fifty-ninth year. The deceased had followed sailing for the greater part of his life, and about two weeks ago he contracted a heavy cold while engaged on the steamer Coreican. This developed into pneumonia and he was obliged to leave the boat and enter the general hospital. The disease, however, took firm hold on him and only relinquished with death.

Deceased was born in Fermanagh, Ire land, in 1839, and when a little child came to Canada with his parents. Ever since he had resided in Kingston, and was widely known in the city and surrounding district. His daily avocation during the summer was that of a sailor, and for the last few years he sailed with Capt. H. Esford on the steamer Corsican. the winter he took out from a quarry tol his own The deceased was a diligent and careful employee, honest and fair in all his deal ings. He was generally respected for many good qualities and was not known to have an enemy. Being a bachelor he only leaves one brother, Themas, fish dealer in this city, and one sister, Mrs. Hill, Adol phustown. In late years he had resided with his aunt, Mrs. Patrick Lennon, Queen street. He was a faithful member of St Mary's cathedral, in which his funeral ser vices will be held on Saturday afternoon.

ALDEGED HIGHWAY ROBBERY

CHARLES TAYLOR ACCUSES ONE THOMAS COLAN.

One Makes Charges Against the Other-Taylor Lost His Watch And Perse Dolan Says They Were Given to Him

by Taylor-A Shady Looking Case. An air of mystery surrounds a case which came under the notice of the police last night. There are two sides told of the story, and which to believe is a puzzler for the police. However, a close luvestigation will be made and the facts obtained, if it is possible to do so. About half past ten o'clock last night police constables Aiken and Megarry were standing in front of alderman Carson's store conversing with that gentleman, when Charles Taylor, son of Jonathan Taylor, carter, came along and informed them that he had been held up and his watch and puree taken from him. He accompanied she police down street and the man supposed to have committed the robbery was pointed out. He appeared quite surprised when taken into custody. At the police station by gave his name as Thomas Dolan, Boston. During the recent military camp at Pitteburg arrived at Garden Island this afternoon he was employed as cook for the 5th field battery. Dolan denied that he took the articles, saying that he was supposed to return them this morning and receive payment from Taylor.

Taylor, employed at Dr. Chown's drug store, stated that about quarter past ten o'clock last night a young man came up to the drug store. Taylor was standing at the door and the man scopped and look. ed in one of the windows, enquiring the price of some cameras. He asked Taylor what time the store would close, and Tay. lor replied at about half past ten. A few minutes later Dr. Chown intimated that gerous. Several children broke through Taylor might leave the store. The stranger, who turned out to be Thomas Dolan, then invited Taylor to go for a walk, leading the way and going down Montreal street, where he turned into the artillery park. Taylor says that immediately Dolan seized him and began "maul ing" him, ending by throwing him to the ground. When he are e Dolan again took hold of him and again forced him to his knees, at the same time pulling Taylor's watch from ite chain, and taking his purse, containing fifty cents, from his pocket. Dolan released Taylor, who ran away. On Montreal street he met Robert J. Bennett, a member of the 14th P.W.O. rifles' band to whom he mentioned the fact that he had been robbed. Bennett asked Taylor why he did not defend himself, and Taylor replied that he was afraid of the fellow and was glad to get away from him. Bennett went through the artillery park and met Dolan standing under the electric light at the corner of Bagot and Barrack etreets. He accused Dolan of having stoler > of "A" field battery. Furthermore that Taylor was to give him money for the return of the articles. When told about this statement Taylor stoutly denied its truth, maintaining that it was Dolan who had attempted to take liberties with him. He exhibited his chain, which was minus the swivel, but had a fairly large ring at the end. Taylor said the swivel had been wrenched off by the articles named, but Dolan denied the statement. He told Bennett that Taylor had taken liberties with him, and that he had heard of Taylor's record from members

At the police court this morning Dolan appeared before mayor Livingston, who would not hear the evidence, adjourning the case until to-morrow.

A VERY TOUGH GANG.

A Couple Of Hundred Track Followers Loot Restaurants

On Wednesday afternoon B. R. Barnfield, manager of the restaurant at the Grand Trunk outer station, met with an experience that he is not likely to forget. About half past three o'clock a train pulled into the station. Mr. Barnfield looked at it in a casual way and concluded it was a circus train passing through. However, it turned out to be a train of nineraces, which opened yesterday. At Fort Erie it was boarded by a couple of Carman, McLeod, Longhead, and H. hundred track followers, beating their way to Montreal. The majority of them were negroes, small in stature, but exceedingly tough, a trait ocquired through following the race track. When the train entered the station Mr. Barnfield was in the restaurant but receiv ing a call to the bar he went in to serve He was alone at the time and soon had hundred or more toughs in front of him; in fact the bar was crowded full, and it has a capacity of over a hundred. The mob Among the numerous officials who pre- did pretty much as it pleased, and the young toughs acted in a disorderly and disgraceful manner. As quickly as possible Mr. Barnfield summoned help, the agent, W. Nicholson being the first to respond and he rendered Mr. Barnfield valuable assistance in saving property from destruction. The restaurant assistants coon put in an appearance, but their number was not sufficient to handle the crowd. However, as soon as possible, the bar room and restaurant were emptied and the doors locked. Then Mr. Barnfield began to count his loss. He found that a number of bottles of whiskey had been taken from a shelf behind the bar. The wholesale cost of the stuff to Mr. Barnfield was $10. A box of cigars was missing, not to mention edibles taken from the restaurant. Twenty dollars would not cover the loss, including breakages of glassware and chinaware. A gang attacked the cigar case, but Mrs. Barnfield took up possession behind it and dared them to take anything from it at their peril. Her bravery and deter mination awed them and they slunk away. By her act Mrs. Burnfield saved $25 worth of cigare from falling into the hands of the toughs. The train was in charge of conductor Alexander Laughlin, but he was unable to cope with the lawless mob, who took possession of his charge. However, he tele graphed ahead to Brockville and had the train run into the Manitoba yards outside the town. In this way the restaurant there was saved looting. A despatch from Hamilton says that the railroad hotel there was assailed by the lot of touts and toughs and was looted and windows and glassware smashed. Cobourg and Belleville refreshment rooms also received the attention of the ruffians and were robbed and damaged. Word was telegraphed from Belleville to keep the local par and refreshment rooms closed and warning Mr. Barnfield of the gang of bandits, but the despatch did not teach Mr. Barnfield in time

TWO DUELS IN AN HOUR.

Resented Criticisms on the United States

Navy and t'nullenged From Toledo comes the story of how an officer in the Ohio naval reserve fought two duels with Spaniards inside of an hour and came out victorious in each en-

The man is Lieutenant Commander Arlington U. Betts. Just before the present war was declared he was in the City of Mexico on business.

One night he attended the Theater Principale, returning to his hotel about midnight after the performance had closed. He was standing in front of the hotel a few moments before retiring to his room half a dozen young Spaniards who stood but a short distance from him conversing

He soon became aware that the young dons were "talking at" him and were uttering uncomplimentary remarks about the United States navy and about Americans in general.

Betts stood it as long as he could; then, suddenly stepping up to them he slapped one of them on the cheek smartly, following it by casting his glove at the fellow's feet. Before the crowd could recover their surprise he had removed his other glove, struck the next nearest man in the face and threw the glove at the man's feet.

The Spaniards slunk away in confusion, but early next morning he was waited on in his room by two of the crowd, who presented to him formal challenges to fight a duel with each of the men whom he had met the night before.

Lieutenant Betts demanded the choice of weapons, which the friends of the challengers could not refuse. In the first case he named 36 inch rawhides of a certain weight and thickness, and buckskin gloves in the other. The Spaniards protested. Betts insisted that he was in earnest and, furthermore, told the interpreter to say to them that he would give them just one hour in which to comply with his demands, and if the terms were not com plied with at the expiration of that time he would publicly brand them as cowards. After considerable parleying they accepted the young American's terms.

Seven o'clock the following morning was named as the hour, and Chapultepec hill, about three miles outside the city, was selected as the spot where the duels were to be fought.

Promptly at the appointed hour the following morning the challengers and their seconds, the lieutenant and his friends, a referee and physician, were at the appointed spot. A stick three feet in length was fastened in the ground. Lieutenant Betts placed his too against one end of it the Spaniard No. 1 taking the same position at the opposite end of the stick. Both were armed with the 36 inch raw hides and at the signal agreed upon went at it. Betts is an expert swordsman, and as the movements with the Mexican rawhide and the sword are very nearly identical the young American was very much at home. Add to this the fact that the and it may well be imagined that Betts | the case come to light.

got along very nicely. He parried the angry, excited don's blows off with his left arm, meanwhile larruping him about the hips in such a manner as to make him fairly howl with pain. A very hard cut brought out a terrible yell, and at that moment, by a swift upper cut. Betts caught his adversary un der the chin with a blow that fairly lifted him from his feet. Dropping his weapon the Spaniard started off with a yell for the woods, and Betts has never seen him since, so he presumed he must have been fully satisfied.

The lieutenant then announced that he was ready for No. 2, who by this time was in anything but a satisfied frame of mind The gloves were donned and the two went

Here again the American was perfectly at home, while the Sponiard had no skil whatever in boxing. Betts thumped him several times in various portions of hi anatomy until a good opening presented itself, when he shot a blow straight for the nose, and the don went to the grass, the blood fairly streaming from his proboseis. His second announced that they were sat isfied, and the party separated.

Lieutenant Betts and his American friends returned to the hotel for a late breakfast and that evening attended a swell social function, as though nothing unusual had occurred.

Betts and his friends carefully guarded the secret of the duels until, coming north to join his command, he told the adjutant general of Ohio the entire story. For a long time nothing was heard of it until General Superintendent Whittlesey of the Ohio Central lines got hold of it and gave It to a newspaper man.

Lieutenant Commander Betts is a well educated man and a magnificent specimen of manhood, is popular in society, a 32 degree Mason and Shriner, and has by his own thrift accumulated a nice property.

THE LATEST INCIDENT IN CON-NECTION WITH IT.

D. McNicoll, Of The O.P R., Returns From Washington-He Presented The Cansdian Road's Side Of The Case-Not Prepared To Say What May Be The Out. come Of The Matter.

MONTREAL, July 15 .- D. McNicoll, passenger manager of the C.P.R., is back from Washington, where the latest incident in connection with the trans-continential passenger rate war was enacted The western railways, which are at war with the Canadian Pacific, sent a deputation to see the inter-state commerce commission about the matter, so Mr. McNicoll thought he would take a trip down to the American capital and tell the members of the commission his side of the story.

He did not have a hearing with the other roads but had the opportunity of setting the Canadian road's side of the case before the authorities after the others were through, and he thinks he gave them some facts with which they were not possessed before. Mr. McNicoll was asked what the American roads hoped to gain at the present time by going before the commission at Washington.

He replied that he did not know exactly what they hoped for unless it was to prejudice the minds of the American people against the Canadian Pacific. The business as conducted at Washington was of an entirely unofficial character and he was not prepared to say what might be the outcome of the matter.

THE MEN SUSPECTED.

They Are Said to Have Been Arrested At Napance As Tramps. Napance Beaver.

There seems now to be no doubt that the men arrested, l'are and Holden, are the two men who were brought before our police magistrate last summer as suspicious tramps. They had been camping at Hawley's point, a short distance up the river, and when searched some suspicious looking implements and a roll of coppars were found in their possession. Many in town have steadily insisted that these men were connected with the robbery, if not the actual perpetrators. The woman Caroline Saucier, sister of Pare, is also said to have been in Napanco at the time, and to have secured lodgings with Mrs. Bicknell on John street. Previous to this she had stopped with Mrs. John Haight, South Napanee, for about two weeks; at the Campbell house for a time; also with Mrs. Scott, near the court house, and with Mrs. William Wallace She called at McLaughlin's express office repeatedly and asked for an expresc parcel which never arrived. She spoke with a strong French accent.

Detectives Dougherty and Carpenter arrived in town yesterday with Robert Mackie, Belleville, whom they had arrested on his return from the Erie races. He was taken before the magistrate and remanded to jail for a week. Mackie is charged with robbing the bank. He has a wife and four children. He had three minutes to catch the last train to Peekskill, but he laughed to himself. He was getting a story that no other reporter could have, and he'd make a Sunday special out of it.

"Not a bit. That's what I was coming to. In the herd of cattle there was a vicious bull, and one day it started for Dewey just as he was walking quietly through the pasture where they were kept. Dewey turned white as a sheet"-"George Dewey turned white as I sheet?" said the new reporter. Here was
