"Opifer per Orbem Dicor."

ATTITUDE OF THE CUBANS. The despatches from Washington, regarding the attitude of the Cubans in the present war, are certainly confusing. One day, and by American, it is announced that the president has been disappointed, that in no way and in no sense have they acted the part of allies, and that they cannot, therefore, be consulted about the form of government which follows. It is added that it will be republican, and that the American capitalists in Cuba are determined that the native element shall not be represented in it.

From this it may be inferred that the their trouble commenced with the rich | planters and land owners, who undertook to make the labourers bear the burdens of misgovernment. Every new tax was a tax upon the labour party, and the burden of them all became so heavy that the people felt they could not endure it, that they it. The struggle so far, with the Cubans, has been for political independence, to the end that life may be made more tolerable, and may not be inclined to let the capitalists dictate the kind of government they shall have, since that may mean a reenactment of the old iniquities under a now regime.
