HE SAID TOO MUCH.

Then He Discovered That He Had Smashed a Beautiful Record.

The danger of saying too much is always more imminent than that of saying too little. The man who is convinced he has approximated the virtues of the Creator and insists upon it to his fellow men is always more offensive than the man who se. cretly believes it, but spares his acquair.tances the knowledge of the awful truth.

A story recently related to a representative of Hardware by the head of a large hardware house in New York illustrates the case in point. Something of this merchant's disposition may be gles ned from the fact that when speaking of his en. ployees he says "the boys," with an affectionate intonation born of long appreciation of their good points and kind toleration for their occasional errors. It was the intention of the house to put another representative on the road, and the man they had in view had been favorably, though not thoroughly, known to them for a long time. Ne gotiations were about concluded, and the signing of a remunerative contract by '.he salesman was regarded by him as a more matter of form. At a final interview with his prospective employer and evident', with the idea of further impressing the latter with his desirability, he said: "Zdr. --, I am an older man than you. I have been in this business for 25 years, and I wish to add that I have never 'made a mistake."

As the would 'be employer reached out on his dosk in an abstracted manner and gathered in the unsigned contract, which he slowly tore up in the same absentminded manner he remarked that it was a source of keen regret to him that he sim-"He won't get it either without the ply couldn't afford to employ such a valuable man, that there was not a man connected with, the house, from himself to the "Won't he, though! the moments. We do not realize the importance of moments. Look back through the history of the church in all ages, and God's servants. The moment may have been spent in uttering fine words, but I they have fed 5.000 or even 500,000. It is Into the corridor of a well known hotel | not so often a whole sermon as a single sentence in it that wings God's arrows to the heart. Again, in our own quiet waitcan irradiate one passing moment with His light that its rays never die away? Are not such proved to have been kept for him? And if some, why not all? O. how much we have missed by not placing them at His disposal! What might He not have done with the moments freighted with self, or loaded with emptiness. which we have carelessly let drift by? O. what might have been if they had all been kept for Jesus! How He might have filled them with His life and light, enriching our own lives that have been impoverished by the waste, and using them in far spreading blessing and power! We see something of God's greatness and wisdom when we fix our dazzled gaze on infinite space; but when we turn to the marvels of the microscope we gain a clearer view of these attributes by gazing on the perfection of His infinitesimal handiworks. Just so, while we cannot No! realize the infinite love which fills etern. ity, we see that love magnified in the microscope of the moments, and revealing its unspeakable perfection of the detail to
