A CHILD AS A HERO.

He Tried to Save Two Youngsters From a Horrible Fate.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Sept. 8.—May Wendell, aged two years and five months, was burned to death at her home, No. 198 Preble avenue, Allegheny, this morning, and her sister Ella, two years older, was terribly burned. The children locked themselves in a wash house, playing with paste board boxes. A lighted candle was placed in one of these. May's clothes caught fire. Ella tried to open the door but failed.

Joseph Ward, aged seven, heard the children's screams, and, failing to break open the door, he jumped on a box, opened a window and entered the room. He carried the burning child to the window, dropped her out, jumped after her, and placed her beneath a hydrant. He then rescued Ella, who was almost suffocated with smoke. The boy was burned about the hands and face.

Jamaica Wishes To Come Into The Canadian Federation.

KINGSTON, Ja., Sept. 8.—The promoters of the movement of bringing about the annexation of Jamaica to the United States having failed to secure popular support because of the color prejudice, are now agitating for admission to the Canadian dominion. Their efforts in this direction promise to prove more successful, but before adopting definite measures the promoters wish to see the result of the efforts of the Barbados conference to secure relief for the sugar and other industries of the British West Indies.

THE ENTERING WEDGE.

The Kingston school of mining and agriculture has had a remarkable career for an institution begun with very small resources. Within five years it has, through the courage and energy of its conductors, advanced to a high stage of practical efficiency and won the confidence of government and people. The board of governors has been loyal to the public interests, harmonious and efficient; the result has been a cordial agreement with the director and the profession in all things, and the mutual trust and agreeable surroundings have drawn into service a grand staff of able professors. Content to serve for the first few years at small salaries from love of the science and hope of establishing a strong school, they have arrived at that point where the faculty is all but complete, happy to feel that each member is distinguished and up to date in his line, enjoying the full confidence of the board, without murmur or exception.

Just when the Ontario government has added to its former generous support the promise of an additional grant of $1,500 to provide, among other things, for a professorship in civil and general engineering, comes the first break in the mutual confidence between chief of staff and the board, and for the first time personal preference and strong language have taken the place of reason and business considerations. Four directors, by mutual understanding, forced upon the school a permanent appointment against the pleadings and opinion of every officer of the board and the voice of the faculty in the only way in which the board can receive it. A majority of the governors are opposed to both the choice and the salary, but illness and absence from the city prevented a full attendance. It is not a little astonishing that four governors, two of whom have not contributed a cent to the funds but are members by reason of holding public office, should take such a course; more surprising still that a professional gentleman would allow his name to be forced on unwilling people. The incident is to be sincerely regretted in the interest of the school, and, indeed of all concerned. The delegations to the government can no longer say with truth that the board has studied economy and the highest possible efficiency. Part of the force of the annual appeal has been lost and the new grant is in danger, for the Minister of Crown Lands does not act without full knowledge of expenditures. College boards are bad places in which to introduce the tactics of public controversial bodies and the blunt arguments of forcible expressions, now having self respect will not work against such ungenerous proceedings.

MORAL TRAINING.

A school trustee, at a meeting last evening, presented the following as affording an explanation of the failure of some boys and girls, and especially some boys, to make the progress in class work that is expected from them:

"The Youth's Companion has this valuable study. An interesting investigation has been made recently in one of our cities as to the reasons why children of equally good capacity should rank so unevenly in their studies in the schools. Pains were taken to learn from one class of fifty-five pupils enough about their habits out of school to enable judgments to be made. The investigation showed that thirteen boys were permitted to be on the streets at night as late as half past nine o'clock. Not one of them ranked as high as thirtieth in the class. Another grade class of fifty-five was tried in the same manner; eight boys were habitually on the streets in the evenings. Not one of them ranked as fortieth in the class. Another class of thirty-five investigated showed that six were allowed the freedom of the streets at night, and every one of them had spent two or three years passing the fourth and fifth grades. One boy of fifteen years of age had spent nine years in getting four and a half years of schooling. Investigation also showed that in these classes examined eighty-five per cent of the girls remained at home and read good books, and about one-third only of the boys ever read at all."

Outdoor exercise is advocated as necessary to the health of the individual. Recreation is essential to his physical well-being. But these are distinctly different from the street parades and street influences that are usually so bad. It is not that harm results from the mere walking on the streets. Loitering becomes common, and with it the harsh spirit that finds expression in the school and home life of the lad. His mind is filled with the thoughts that are current on the streets. His ambitions are stirred with its incidents and excitements. He is not in studious mood, cannot be recalled to it, and becomes rebellious to the discipline of the school room. The teacher may appeal to the honor, the manhood, the moral nature of the scholar, under such circumstances, and the appeal will be in vain.

"Educators are now coming," says a writer in the Canadian Baptist, "to see that the highest and most responsible part of the work of education is that which has to do with the moral nature. All will agree that it is of vastly more importance that our boys should be developed into high souled, broad-minded, true-hearted men, than even that they should be clever or learned. The essential elements of all right character are ability to discern and determination to do the right, on all occasions, under all circumstances. To attain this end it is indispensable that moral truthfulness—the power of choosing between right and wrong, and the sense of personal responsibility for doing so—fixed, unchangeable habit. Such a habit would be cultivated and developed into a fixed, unchangeable habit. Such a habit would be the basis of the high moral character which alone truly fits one for society, for citizenship, for whatever is worth doing in life."

Parents sometimes complain if their boys do not pass from one department in the school to another. They reason, apparently, that one must, as a matter of rule or of form, make certain progress in a certain time. It never occurs to them that study, successful study, means application, and that there cannot be application where the mind is distracted or distracted by occurrences outside the school room. Let the evening engagements become engrossing, let them occupy the mind during the day, as they too often do, and the teacher cannot command attention, and the pupil cannot study. Parents should see to this, should understand it, and should so shape the home life of the boy that when he goes to school he will be impressionable. This cannot be unless he is kept more indoors, at least more away from those who wander about the streets and indulge in pastimes of a demoralizing nature. It is not argued that the hours at home should be spent in study, but they should be given up to the occupations that are refining, calming, and edifying.

The education of the future will be the education that involves moral training from infancy up, a training in which the parents will assist, and to the extent of seeing that the nature of the children are not ruined for school life by street dissipation, by a wastefulness of time, by companionship that, unchecked, will neutralize the work of the best teacher in the public schools.

EDITORIAL PARAGRAPHS.

The French papers are exercised over the success of the British troops in Egypt. They are anxious for the evacuation of the land by her majesty's troops. Oh, that can never be. England, like America, must hold the territory she conquers for the good of the world.

It is proposed to increase the hotel accommodation down the river. What about Kingston? Can anything be done to bring the people here for longer stays than the few hours that intervene between the arrival and departure of the boats? Kingston can be made an attractive resort.

The Montreal correspondent of the New York Sun professes to have found in Canada a growing sentiment in favour of the annexation with the United States. There never was a time when annexation was less thought of and desired. The correspondent has been "mooning," which he will understand if he be one of the boys.

Had A Rough Voyage.

The schooner Fabiola on her trip across from Charlotte yesterday experienced a rough time in the storm. The wind blew hard from the south-west, which wind stirred up a heavy sea on lake Ontario. The crew were so high that the captain was unable to keep his course for this port, as every wave would hit the schooner's stern clean out of the water. He found it necessary to keep her up, so that the rolling seas would strike her port quarter aft and break over the decks. Under close reef the Fabiola ran most of the distance across the lake completely under the water. The force of the waves broke in the cabin doors and windows, scattering the cabin furniture in every direction. F. Saunders, a sailor, was washed from the wheel and carried some distance along the decks and it was with difficulty that the crew were able to remain on the boat. Capt. D. Bates says it was the heaviest blow he has ever seen on lake Ontario at this season of the year. The steamer Iron Chief and company's Iron Chief remained at anchor in the harbor until daylight, not caring to face the storm.

MR. HERRINGTON IN TOWN.
Major Ponton Can Get A Fair Trial In Napanee.

TORONTO, Sept. 8.—W. S. Herrington, Napanee, acting crown attorney of Lennox county, at the Rossin house, was interviewed. He stated that there was not yet any decision on the part of the crown to apply for a change of venue in the Ponton case.

"I think that Ponton can get a fair trial in Napanee," said he; "the sentiment of the town is cooling, and the citizens are getting into a more judicial frame of mind. The question of change in the venue will be decided later."

"Pars is the healthiest prisoner we have and he will be in good shape to give his evidence in November. From what I can learn the prisoner Holden is seriously considering the subject of following Pars' example. He was talked into fighting conviction, and is wakening up to the fact that he has nothing to fight on."

The crown will have additional evidence to offer at the trial in November. The story that the crown was afraid to put Mrs. McGreer in the box is nonsense. She is ready to tell her story."

Anglo-American Unity.

"With profound satisfaction we regard the amicable relations and deepening sympathies which now exist between the British empire and the United States of America. A close and cordial union of these two great branches of the Anglo Saxon race is the best guarantee for the spread of liberty, righteousness and the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ throughout the world. We invoke the divine blessing upon the efforts now being made to settle all the differences between Canada and the United States on terms of mutual advantage, respect and good will." It was unanimously carried.
