This type usually has square shoulders, short body, long arms, and long legs.

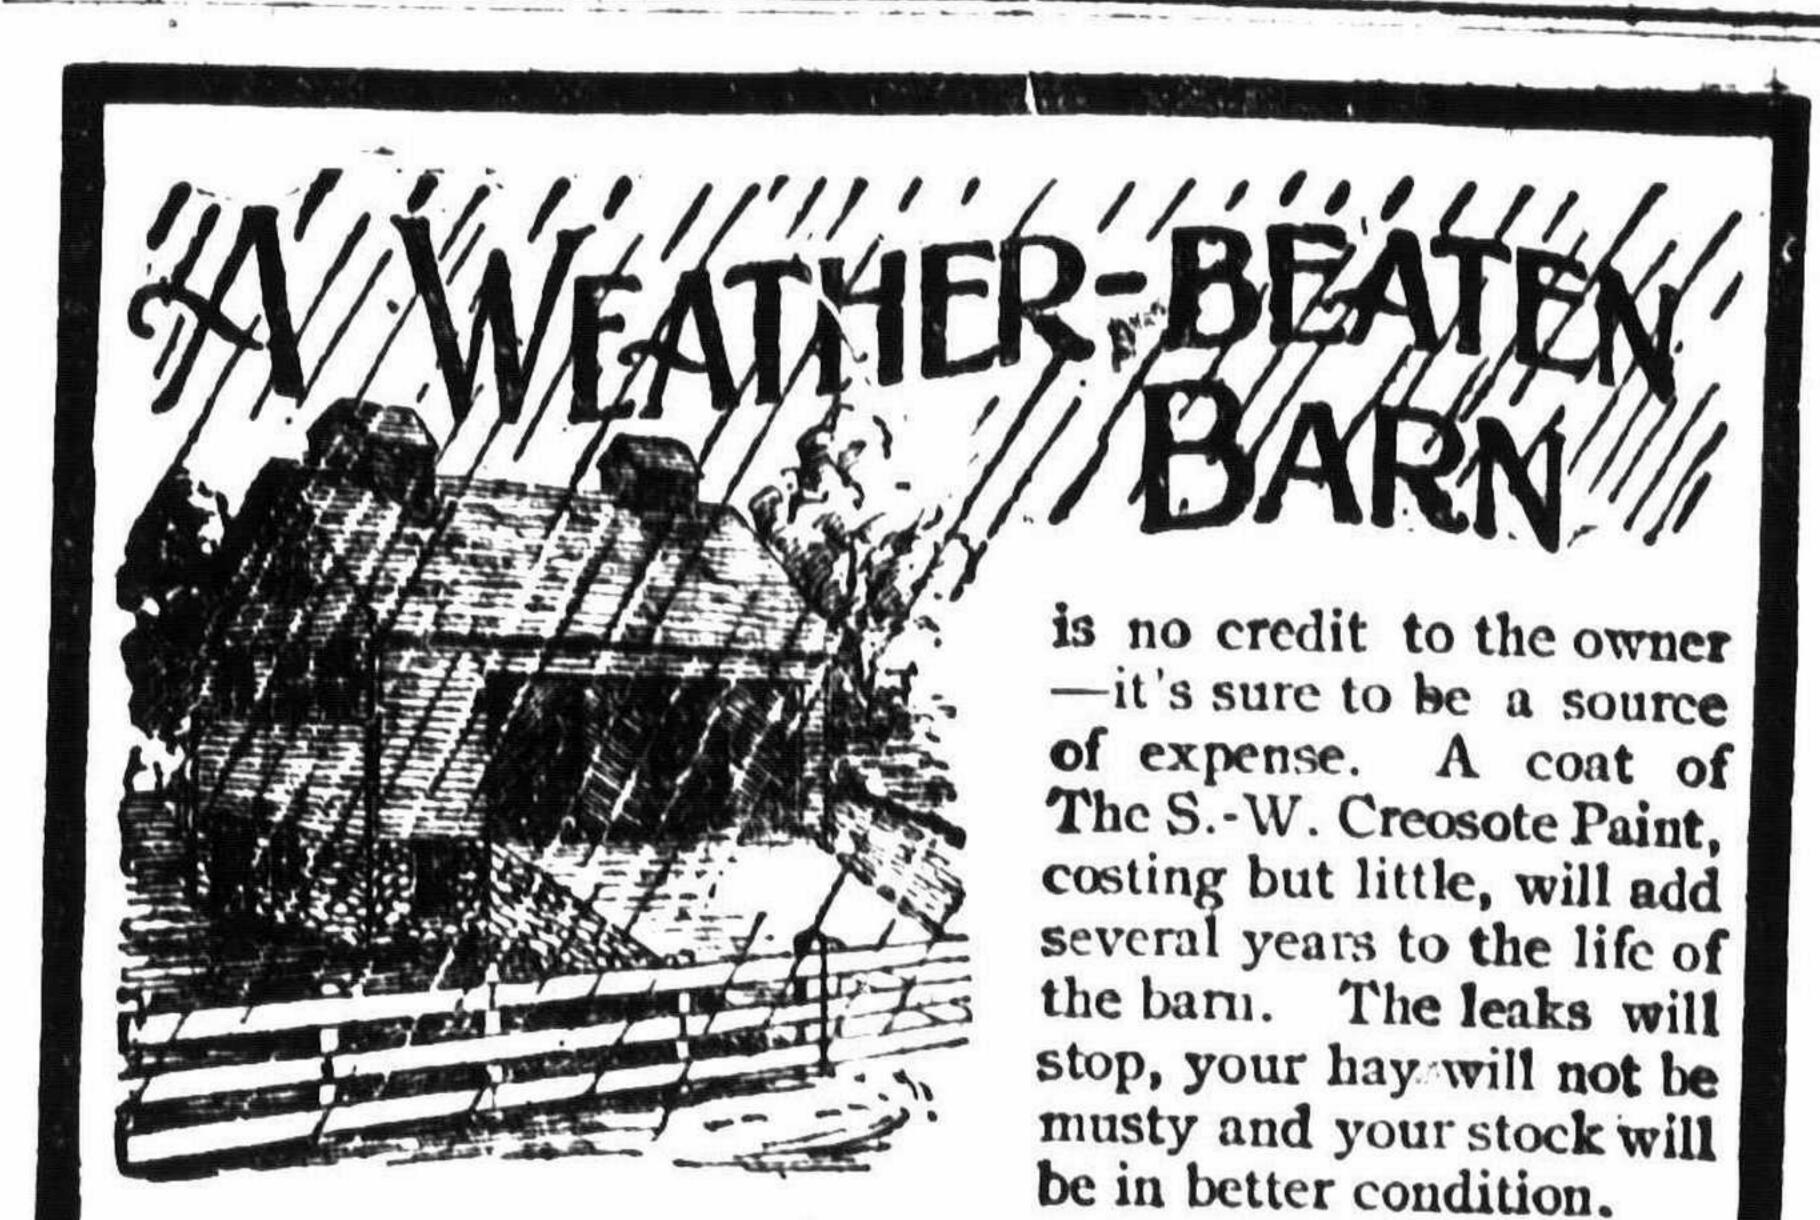

The "Fit-Reform" suit which best offsets these peculiarities is close-fitting "Cutaway" or "Frock," which apparently elongates the body, and thus shortens to the eye, the length of legs and arms.

In tweeds, such a form would be best attired in rough-surfaced fabrics, of large but subdued, patterns. Stripes, either in trousers or coat should be avoided.
