THE LAW IN MAINE.

Goldwin Smith, having quoted Gail Hamilton to the effect that drinking prevailed in Maine, a London clergyman becomes offensive.

Gail Hamilton was the non de plume of Miss Abigail Dodge, one of the best known authors in the United States, one of the busiest and best women in her day.

Some years ago two men, representing a Toronto paper, went to Maine to write up their experiences. One was a prohibitionist and the other an anti-prohibitionist.

AN OLD MARINER.

Salied Up Here Seventy-Five Years Ago—Chat With Capt. Taylor.

There was a gentleman on the board of trade to-day who came up the St. Lawrence in a sailing craft seventy-five years ago.

He is Capt. W. R. Taylor, Kingston, and was introduced on board by D. G. Thompson.

"Yes," said Capt. Taylor, who is a hearty gentleman of eighty-three, although he scarcely looks older than seventy or seventy-five, "it was just seventy-five years ago that we came up the St. Lawrence."

"Not steam," said someone. "Hardly," said the captain, laughing. "We sailed, and it just took us two weeks to make the trip from Quebec to Montreal. And there was a pilot on board too."

"If you had work, I can tell you, but when there was no wind all we had to do was to drop anchor and wait."

"When we arrived here we anchored beside a bank. There were the days when Montreal was without wharfs."

"And where did your vessel come from, captain, and what was the cargo?" asked one of the interested audience.

"Newcastle," said the captain. The name of the ship was Richard and Ann, and the cargo was a general one, with considerable quantities of wheat and flour.

"And I suppose you see a few slight changes in Montreal since then, captain?" "Rather," said the captain, with a twinkle in his eye.

The captain is a remarkable man. BLOOMFIELD, Sept. 14.—A cold wave passed over here and a slight frost was noticed on the 11th inst.

Death of Mrs. Morgan. BLOOMFIELD, Sept. 14.—A cold wave passed over here and a slight frost was noticed on the 11th inst.

Death of Robert Craig. SPENCER, Sept. 13.—The weather the past few days has felt quite fall-like and frosts have done considerable damage to potatoes and corn.

Football Notes. Toronto Mail. "Buntz" Dalton is once more behind the scrimmage for the Kingston franchise.

Good-by Judge. Editorial From The Dawson Nugget. Judge McCreary is an honest judge. He is not looking for a rake-off and in a cold country he has given us what Mr. Hardy calls "warm justice."

Death of A. P. Jones. Capt. Henry McCaulay, aged seventy-eight, died in Ogdensburg Tuesday. He was born in Richmond, Ont., but made his home in Ogdensburg since 1838.

GOES TO NEW ZEALAND.

Prof. Ruddleick Has Accepted A Dairy Commissioner's Position.

J. A. Ruddleick, superintendent of the Kingston dairy school, has decided to accept the offer of the New Zealand government and has called his acceptance.

He will leave here at once to become dairy commissioner of that country, a position formerly occupied by Mr. McKeown, also a Canadian and a personal friend of Mr. Ruddleick.

The salary of the new dairy commissioner was placed at $2,500 and in addition the government stands the expense of his transportation to that country.

It is thought that the dairy industry of the Dominion, as he is the foremost authority upon the subject in the country.

Under his care the Kingston dairy school has thrived and prospered during the four years of its existence, and to-day it is acknowledged the best equipped and giving the most complete training of any similar institution upon the continent.

Since its inception over 400 students from all parts of America have taken the prescribed course in butter and cheese making.

The superintendent has been the principal lecturer on dairy subjects and cheese making. He is a young man, but has had wide and varied experience in his chosen profession.

He owes his success to his zeal, his cautious observations and intensely practical methods in all his undertakings.

His advice on dairy subjects is eagerly sought after and closely followed, always with success. He has unbounded faith in the future of the dairy industry in Ontario and would prefer remaining in the Dominion, but circumstances overrule his sympathies in this respect.

Mr. Ruddleick was born near Ingersoll, in Oxford county, the birthplace of the co-operative cheese factory and the home of many of those who may be called the fathers of co-operative dairying in Canada.

During 1880 and 1881 he learned cheese making at Victoria, Norfolk county, and in 1882 was engaged by D. M. MacPherson, M.P.P. for Glangarry, known throughout Canada as the "Cheese King," to manage one of his factories.

Before completing his first season Mr. Ruddleick was selected out of some forty other cheese-makers as superintendent of the factories of Mr. MacPherson. He held in this capacity for seven years, thus acquiring a wide knowledge of the business.

During 1889-90 Mr. Ruddleick acted as travelling instructor for the eastern dairymen's association, which position he resigned in 1891 and accepted a position on the staff of the Dominion Dairy Commission. In this latter connection he has done excellent work.

He managed the first winter creamery in Canada, under Prof. Robertson's direction. He carried on extensive experiments in regard to paying for milk for cheese making by the percentage of butter-fat, at the Perth dairy station, in 1892.

He was the maker of the famous mammoth cheese which won such distinction at the Chicago world's fair in 1893. By means of a travelling dairy he aided considerably in the development of co-operative dairymen in Manitoba, the north-west and British Columbia.

Under Prof. Robertson's supervision he had charge of the Kingston dairy school for two years, and when that institution was taken over by the provincial government to become the provincial superintendent of the dairy school he prepared under his management and in attendance of students each year is increasing. His experiments are being continually carried on during the summer season, and so far have been productive of very good results.

VINDICATES HIMSELF.

Dominion Official Wade Never Made A Cent Out Of Klondyke Mines.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Sept. 13.—Frederick Wade, late of Dawson, said in an interview here yesterday that he knew nothing about being called "a crooked Dominion official," until he reached Victoria.

He did not talk in Victoria, giving his explanations only to the Daily Province, (liberal) Vancouver. He said the country was swarming with cheap agitators who must curse somebody for their ill-luck, so cursed the Dominion officials.

Mr. Wade then denied all the charges made against him. He was called the mining registrar and he was really a crown prosecutor. He was charged with blanketing creeks, by the Tribune of Winnipeg, his enemy. He never staked out a claim on a creek, two claims were staked by McGuire and himself on the Monte Cristo, out of thirteen on the same date for "missing friends of ours on the spot."

There was no law against it. He never made a dollar out of mines in his life. The man who circulated the slanders about him, he says, is named Polkey, of Winnipeg. The name was changed to Pelletier at Dawson.

Mr. Wade then roasts the Mail and Empire for writing about liberal officials staking claims, when conservative officials, who preceded them, did the same. He believed there was no harm in it. He did rent a water front by the river but did not make a dollar. He did not come out to avoid Mr. Ogilvie. "I did thrash Polkey on the wharf for a false statement made," Mr. Wade now challenges anybody to prove a single charge made against him. Mr. Wade says: "If a man cannot make money in Klondyke he cannot make it anywhere."

MARRIES HER SLACK LOVER. Scotch Girl Becomes the Wife of a Negro Despite Opposition.

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—Martin Hamilton, the Irish-American haunting the barge office since the arrival last Thursday of his white sweetheart, Maggie Wood, a young Scotch immigrant, wore a confident air and a new suit when he appeared yesterday before the special board of enquiry.

His black, intelligent face shone with delight. He was ready for a marriage ceremony. His counsel had little difficulty in convincing the board that Hamilton had a legal right to take away the young woman and marry her, if she had no objection. The board agreed and decided to let her have her way.

So, when the black man came for her with a carriage and a dominie, no obstacles were put in her way. The dominie proved to be a Presbyterian, only a few shades lighter than Hamilton. The young Scotchwoman is also a Presbyterian. She was the more reconciled to her marriage when she learned that the Rev. Mr. Thompson had a white wife and that they were living happily together.

The witnesses to the marriage were lawyer Webster, George E. Wilberan of Brooklyn, and the dominie's wife, who stood in the background with a two-year-old baby in her arms, looking quite delighted. The bride and bridegroom acted sedately.

The black man and his wife will go to house keeping in Newark, where Hamilton has bought a home. He is an asphalt street grader, and gets $1.50 a day.

ROMANTIC MARRIAGE. Henry Sanford, Of The Adams Express, Marries Mrs. Burchard.

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—Henry Sanford, vice-president and director of the Adams express company, and reputed to be many times a millionaire, was married Tuesday to Mrs. Olive Burchard. Sanford is seventy-eight years old and his bride about thirty years.

The ceremony was performed in the church of Heavenly Host by Rev. Dr. Murran, the rector, and a reception was held afterward at the Buckingham hotel, at which Mrs. Burchard has lived when in the city since the death of her first husband two years ago.

Mr. Sanford's marriage is the culmination of a romantic attachment. He has been a widower for many years, and Mrs. Burchard was a friend of his daughter and came frequently to his home in Brighton, Conn. During these visits Mr. Sanford was strongly attached to her, and after her husband's death he became a frequent visitor at the Buckingham when Mrs. Burchard was in New York.

Mrs. Sanford's maiden name was Wilmet, and her home was in Newcastle, Ontario, where she has latterly spent most of her time. She was married several years ago to Dr. Thomas H. Burchard. She is described as a woman of great beauty. The wedding was attended by Mrs. Sanford's father and by Mr. Sanford's children and grandchildren.
