Few teas are grown, gathered, cured and packed with the nice care which attends Monsoon Indo-Ceylon Tea, from its first sprout to the day when it is wrapped and sealed in the lead packets, sold by all dealers. That is why few teas equal Monsoon in either purity or quality—and none ever approach Monsoon's own, exquisite flavor.

Historic Town Burned.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Sept. 19.—A director of Golden Cache mine announced last night a thirty-three day run of twenty-five tons a day, $10,500 a ton on plates. Historic Fort Douglas, a town at the head of Harrison river, has been completely destroyed by fire. The first court in British Columbia was held there. The fire was started by a fire putting on too big a fire in the stove, igniting a quantity of fire wood.

It is a strange coincidence that New Westminster and Fort Douglas were burned at the same time. The latter was named after Governor Douglas and the site of the former was christened and named by Governor Douglas at the command of the queen.

THE FRENCH IN EGYPT

Arc Not Prepared to Fight Kitchener.

TO COVER THEIR CRIMES.

PARISIAN GENERALS MAY BRING ON A WAR.

Probably the Excited Derivatives Only Imagine They Saw the French Tri-Color at Fashoda—The Country is Undoubtedly Egyptian Territory, and Therefore France Has no Right to It—Unlikely That the Two Nations Will Fight Over a Small Piece of Swamp in Equatorial Africa.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—Harold Frederick, calling from London on the Times regarding the supposed presence of Major Marchand at Fashoda, says: "Granting that the panic-stricken derivatives in their crazy old penny steamers really saw the tri-color waving at Fashoda, the crucial question is whether the French are prepared to fight in order to retain possession. If so, some sense prevailed I do not think they are. By no twisting of history can this portion of the Nile be made out as other than Egyptian territory. Schweinfurth so considered it in 1870. Baker retook the whole neighborhood on behalf of Egypt in 1870, and three years later the unlucky Yusuf was the Egyptian governor of Fashoda.

"Thus for more than a quarter of a century it has been impossible honestly to label this place no man's land. But suppose the French ignore this fact, as do their hysterical newspapers. Surely with a navy of samples, as Lockroy courteously admitted in France, can hardly be so mad as to try conclusions with the English fleet, an experiment which, as things are to-day, can only end in increasing and chastening the self-knowledge and the French admiralty and a striking diminution in the number of their ships. Of course the French politicians are charmed with any new opportunity of plunging 'perfidious Albion.' Yet they care precious little, and perhaps know still less, about all this Upper Nile question. It is not burning or even smouldering in France to-day, but it might be lighted up by a pose of angry generals eager to hide the stance of their own corruption and perhaps honestly desirous of ceasing a revolution by letting the blood of Englishmen instead of shooting down Parisians. That is a real danger, compared to which Fashoda is but a harmless, almost a ludicrous incident."

Cabling in the Tribune on the subject Mr. Fort says: "The English article in the Times taken in the Fashoda affair by the French and English press. It is discussed in a theatrical manner on each side of the channel, but there is no real ground for apprehension that the two powerful nations will ever go to war over a swamp hole in equatorial Africa. The sirdar may raise the British flag and Marchand may protest, but ultimately the dispute will be settled by diplomacy. French rivalries in Africa have diminished in importance since the alliance with Russia has been directed by the czar's manifesto. The situation at Fashoda is melodramatic, and until the sequel is learned it causes a certain degree of anxiety in official circles here and in Paris, but an open conflict between Marchand's small force and the sirdar's Egyptian army is hardly within the range of probability. Nor is it creditable that the sirdar, after a conquest of Khartoum, will be asked to place the French expedition in possession of the White Nile region. There will be an exchange of courtesies after the British and Egyptian flags are raised at Fashoda and the whole matter will be relegated to the slow procession of diplomacy, as in West Africa when the final adjustment of the frontiers being the French empire in Northwest Africa and the British Egyptian empire, extending from Alexandria to the lakes and thence through Tanganyika to South Africa. The French people are so intensely pre-occupied with the Dreyfus affair, which is now in a critical stage, that they can take no longer interest in Marchand's adventures."

Marchand's Characteristics.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—The Manchester Courier publishes a report of an interview with an intimate friend of major Marchand, and he describing Marchand as an extremely modest and retiring little man, who when at school was nicknamed "The Mouse." He is not particularly clever, but is plotting and determined in a quiet sort of way. The secret of his success in life is his talent for keeping on good terms with the authorities without forfeiting his self-esteem. His friends are unable to understand to what extent his self-repression is natural or how far the result of calculation, as he is known to indulge in the most violent fits of passion. He is a romantic believer in the future of France as a power, and if he is met with by the British whites in one of his enthusiastic moods there will be trouble.

The British At Omdurman.

OMDURMAN, Sept. 19.—The khalfia, though present at the big fight, did not appear so far as outlook could be seen to do much in the way of fighting. He was in none of the desperate charges, and when he saw that the day was irretrievably lost to him he handed his black standard to his brother Yakub and bolted into Omdurman.

Wed Heis, one of the chief emirs, had comforted himself like a man and was wounded, but he too did not wait for the finish, preferring to hurry after the khalfia. It is said that he took charge of his chief's wives.

The terrible destructiveness of the Maxim was something to be remembered. Life was impossible in their zone of fire. The men of the 21st Lancers, who fell in the memorable charge, have been buried in the hour where they fell.

The funeral of the Hon. Hubert Howard, Times correspondent, was an impressive one. The body was carried to the grave

A PENAL STATION.

Conference Discusses the Hard Lot of Newfoundland Miners.

TORONTO, Sept. 19.—The lot of the Methodist minister who is sent to Newfoundland is indeed a hard one, and Saturday morning, compared by one of the delegates to the general conference with that of exiles in Siberia. Although it is possible for the stationing committee to send ministers to the island, it is extremely difficult to bring them back to the continent owing to the overcrowded state of the ministry here. With the view of holding out hope to the Newfoundland minister of relief from exile the transfer committee recommended that at least four married men should be transferred from the Newfoundland conference to other conferences during the quadrennial conference in 1902. After much talk the recommendation was then adopted, together with an amendment of Rev. A. E. Russ, of Welland, providing that those transferred into the Newfoundland conference might be retrofitted after eight years' residence.

After a long debate which sometimes became excited the proposal of the committee to transfer the Nipissing and Sudbury districts from the Montreal and Toronto conferences was carried on a total vote of 140, 102 being for and 38 against.

W. T. R. Preston pointed out that the discipline required two-thirds majority of all the delegates, who numbered about 280, and that the vote was therefore invalid. The chairman did not decide the point, but left it in abeyance until Monday.

It will also put an end, it is said, to the long series of litigation which have resulted over patents.

RIEING FROM ITS ASHES.

The Royal City Being Partly Rebuilt—The Irreproachable Newspaper.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Sept. 19.—Just a week has elapsed since the big fire in New Westminster. Although the scene in the city to day is sufficiently hoarse-breaking, it is evident everywhere that the royal city is pluckily rising from its ashes. Saturday as a public meeting voted of thanks were passed expressing heartfelt gratitude of the citizens of Vancouver, Victoria and Seattle and all the cities and towns in Eastern Canada from whence help came.

The fire is not yet out. Smouldering ashes still demand the attention of fire brigade men, under the superintendence of acting chief Watson. Preparations are already under way for commencing operations immediately or next spring on more than fifteen substantial and handsome brick buildings to take the place of some of those destroyed and before long the indications are that more of such structures will be arranged for.

The dominion government engineer has received instructions from Ottawa to erect a temporary building at the rear of the burned one, for the purpose of post office, customs house and land office work. The bank of Montreal has purchased the lot on which the V.M.C.A. hall stood and will erect a solid brick building thereon for banking purposes.

Saturday the Columbian, the oldest established newspaper, whose fortunes have been burned up with those of New Westminster, made its re-appearance.

AN ACT OF HEROISM.

An Alpine Guide Gave His Life For a Traveller.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—The season's record of Alpine fatalities is appalling. Last week added several to the list. It also brings one of the most splendid stories of heroism ever told. Prof. Nasse, well known in Berlin as the assistant of Prof. Bergman, and Dr. Borchardt with two guides, the four men roped together, were crossing the Paboine over a snow bridge, which was considered safe by the guides. The bridge gave way and the two leading guides and Prof. Nasse fell into a crevice. Nasse had the rope around his chest and hung in mid air.

A half hour later, to relieve the intolerable strain, the leading guide cut the rope between himself and Prof. Nasse and disappeared into the depths. The other guide and Dr. Borchardt were then able to pull Prof. Nasse up but he was dead. It is cheering to know that the guide who so willingly offered his life was not killed, but was found unharmed.

STARVING IN CUBA.

Privation and Misery Still Wreak Fearful Devastation.

HAVANA, via Key West, Sept. 19.—Reports from Matanzas state that dreadful conditions prevail there. The poor are dying in the public streets and highways at an average of four or five daily. Besides the twenty-seven unburied bodies before reported, the bodies of four men and women who have died from starvation were found in the street. One child, almost dead from hunger, was found close to the wall of El Oriente foundry. This condition of things in the neighboring section towns demands instant attention.

Advices from other towns in the interior and on the coast report that distress and want prevail, principally among the Cuban troops who are camped on the outskirts. Calbarion is apparently the worst off. Calbarion is the port which Gen. Gomez, in a communication to Gen. Wada, asked should be the first evacuated, in order to establish a Cuban base of supplies in order to minister to the wants of the troops in the field.
