More than that, there were times when she became partly taralized. and the doctors who were in attend ance had given up all expectation of her recovery. At this time a friend in Toronto, hearing of Mrs. Adams' serious condition, advised the use of Milburn's Heatt and Nerve Pills, It was the last par of hope, and Mrs. Adams concluded to try the remedy, On February 3rd she get the first box, and started taking them. That was a Thursday, Friday night the first good effects of the medicine were made evident in Mrs. Adams getting sound, refreshing sleep, the first good night's rest she had had in months. From that time on every day found her improving in health and getting stronger. The terrible pains that used to shoot through her head and arms dicappeared, the spells of numbress and partial paralysis that came over her at times bothered her no more. Soon she was able to resume he household duties, and in addition bake her own bread, a thing she had pallid check and guing which from attempted for the past two
