THE SUBJECT OF MISSIONS. Services In Princess Street Church -Three Strangers Spoke.

The services in the Princess street Methodist church yesterday were devoted to the subject of missions. In the morning Rev. W. R Barker, Toronto, delivered an excellent discourse from Matthew XVI, 18: "Thou are Peter and upon this rock will I build My church, and the gates of hell shall not p evail against it " The God, and in elequent language exhorted pitale. the church to renewed effort.

In the evening Rev. Eber Crummy, M.A. B Sc., late professor in the imperial university, Japan, spoke to a large and attentive audience. He chose as the basis of his remarks the words "Not by might, nor by power, but by My spirit eaith the Lord ' Mr. Crummy clearly showed how the advance in christian missions in Japan was due in a special way to the Holy Spirit. The many peruliar obstacles to be overcome and the national prejudices and peculiarities rendered the task of the christian missionary exceedingly difficult, but the way has been miraculous ly opened and christianity has achieved great success.

At the close of the discourse Miss Crombie, an agent of the woman's foreign missionary society of the Methodist church, spoke, telling of her work among the women of Japan. She was listened to with marked attention as she related incident after incident, showing the effect of christianity on the women of the "Sunrise" empire. The services of the day were if an exceedingly interesting character, and the offerings to missions from this congregation show an advance of over 300 per cent. over last year.

How is it the officers of the 11 h hattalion have not better control of their men upon the occasion of causeh paradea? It is always the same way. Church parades, as far as the 14th battal on is concerned, are little better than a farce.

The Four mile red light now stands some rods west of the eastern end of the reef, on which there is very little water, and frequently boars have grounded on the edge, being misled by the location of the light. As the channel to the east of the light was not the same depth of water that is found in that to the west large steamers prefer coming in by the latter, the old alip channel. One obstruction, however, is met with in this course, in a shoal known as the Middle Ground, lying about one half a mile south west of the light. It will be proposed to Col. Interesting Incidents Of Life on The Ocean Deep - The Devil Fish Is A Name Generally Applied To All Marine Mousters-An Eighteen Foot Specimen-It Has No Commercial Value-the Nan.e

Is Very Appropriate From the Cornhill Magazine. Among such primitive peoples as still exist, not the least curious or notable trait which uffiversally of tains is the manner in which all things uncanny, or which they are unable to comprehend, are by common consent ascribed to the devil. Not to a devil as one of a host, but the devil par excellence, as though they under stood him to be definable only as the master and originator of whatsoever things are terrifying, incomprehersible or cruel. Many eminent writers have copiously enriched our literature by their researches into this all-prevailing peculiarity, so that the subthrashed out, and it is merely alluded to en passant as one of the chief reasons for the epithet which forms the title of this article. Now it will doubtless be readily admitted that sea-folk retain, even among highly civilized nations, their old world habits of thought and expression longer than any other at the original cause of what was real branch of the population. This can scarcely be wondered at, since to all personal relations with it. But when those whose daily bread depends upon their constant struggle with the mighty marine forces, who are familiar with so many of its matvels, and saturated with the awe inspiring solemnity which is the chief course of their avocations brought from the gloomy unknown depths, with one accord they speak of the monster as a "devil fish," and the name never fails to stick

So that there is not one species of devil fish, but several, each peculiar to inspiring its own special terror in the hearts of mariners of many nations. Of the devil fish that we in this coun try hear most about, and is indelibly portraved for us by Victor Hugo, the octobus, so much has been written and said that it is not necessary now to do much more than make passing allusion to the family. But the phalopoda embrace so vast a variety that it seems hardly fair to single out of them all the comparatively harmless octobus for opprobrium, while leaving severly unmentioned the gigantic onychetenthis of the deep sea, to say nothing of many inter mediate cuttle fish. From the enor mous mollusk just mentioned -which is, not unreasonably, credited by scamen with being the largest fish in the ocean-to the tiny loligo, upon which nearly all deep water fish feed, hide ousness is their prevailing feature and truly appaling of aspect some of the larger ones are, while their on nivorous voracity makes them verita ble sea scavengers, to whom nothing comes amiss live or dead.

A gloomy shade came over the bright water, and up rose a fearsome monster some eighteen feet across, and in general outline more like skate or ray than anything else, all except the head. There, what at peared to be two builing horns about three feet apart, rose one on each side of the most hourible pair of eyes unaginable. A shack's eyes as he turns sideways under your vessel's onater and looks up to see if anyone is coming are ghastly, given and moon to look over the harbor with the view | these and much more. These ugly monsters have as yet no commercial value although from their vast extent of flat surface they might be found worthy of attention for their skins, which should make very excellent shazreen. Another widely known and feared levil fish has its headquarters in the Northern Pacific, nostly along the American coast, especially affecting the Gulf of California, This hage creature is mammal, one of the great whale family, really a rorqual of me dium size and moderate yield of oil Like the rest of this much detested and feared (among whalers branch of the ceta-ea, 'it carries but a tiny fringe of valueless whalebone, and sperm and "right" whales, its value is small. they could manage. The case with which the wrates were being obtained, however, led to considerable carelessness and forge fulness of the fact that the whale never changes its habits. One bright morning, about three weeks after the opening of the season, the whole flotilla of fif y-two boats, four from each ship, had been lowerest and were making their way as rapidly as possible to the outlying parts of the great bay, ke ping a bright lookout for "fish." Spreading out farwise, they were getting more and more scattered, when about near to the centre of the feet some one suddenly "struck" and get fast a fish. But hardly had the intimation been given when something very like panic seized upon the crowd. In a moment or two the reason was apparent. From some cause, never definitely known, a harpoon had in striking large cow whale transfixed her call at her side with his harpeon, killing it immediately. The mother having quietly satisfied terself that her off spring was really dead, turned upon ggressors like a veritable demon of destruction, and, while carefully avoiding exposure of her body to at tack, simply spread devastation among the flotilla. Whenever she rose to the surface, it was but for second, to emit an expiration like the hiss of a lifting sefety valve, and al most always to destroy a boat or complete the destruction of one already hopelessly damaged,

Every blow was dealt with an accuracy and appearance of premeditation that filled the superstitions Por tuguese, who formed a good half of the crews, with dismay - the more so that many of them could only guess

Out of the large number of well equipped boats that left the ships that morning, only these two escaped undamaged, and the loss of the season's work was irremediable. Over fifty men were badly injured, and six, one of whom was the unhappy origin ome different part of the world, and lof the whole trouble, were killed out

It is among the Leeward islands however, that the barracouta attains his largest dimensions, and has inspir ed the fishermen and boatmen with such dread of him that, while they hold the universally leared shark i supreme contempt, the mere rumor of "devil fish" anywhere in their vil lage will bring every negro within hail scrambling out of the water in double

Whether rightly or wrongly, I have never been able to ascertain by person al observation, but undoubtedly the fact is that the barracouta is credited with an infernal propensity for inflict ing a nameless mutilation upon an human being unfortunate enough to get within reach of him. He is long and narrow, blue black above, with a silvery gray belly, and swift as an ar row. His lower jaw is considerably longer than the upper, and both are armed with teeth, almost exactly like these of a dog. The newspapers here to day warmly praise the exposition of the French side of the Fashoda question presented by the minister of foreign affairs, M. Delcaste in the vellow book on the subject, issue yesterday.

The Figure says : "If the British government rejects France's just proposals it can only be because the government of Great Britain desires before everything else the humiliation of France."

The general tone of the French press comments is reflected by the Eclair, which says . "An agreement regarding Fashoda can be arrived at, provided that Great Britain does not persist in asking for the immediate recall of major Marchand. London, Oct. 24 - The Paris corres pondent of the Sunday Times says : The change of tone of the press is noteworthy. It is now certain the Fashoda question is left out of all negotiations between France and England, and that both governments have grasped the double fact that England means to stick to her programme, while France is certainly entitled to facilities of cression to the Nile.

London, Oct. 24 The French yellow book on Fashoda seems to indicate an intention on the part of the French government to util ze the Marchand affair as s means of raising the whole Egyptian question. This impression is confirmed by the comments of most of the Paris papers this

The London papers, however, are unantmous in declaring that it is impossible for lord Salisbury to consent to any negotiations until Fashoda is evacuated. As the French foreign minister, M. Dilcasse, with equal firmness declines to withdraw Marchand without previous negotiation, the eituation has an ominous look.
