PATRIOTISM IN PUBLIC SERVICE. A remarkable spectacle was presented in E-linburg recently when Lord Rosebery, and Right Hon. A. J. Balfour, representing the highest types of partyiom, appeared on the same platform. They delivered spreches in which advice was given to the young men to be patriotic above all things, of the party pistol, endeavoured after to have political opinions but to have them in bermony when the intercets of the empire were at stake. Lord Rosebery feed that gentleman his support. He was the successor of Gladstone in the leadership of the liberal party, and the most popular liberal peer in England to day, is not a dreamer. Yet be said he had longings betimes, or day dreams, to see founded a department whose function it would be to train men for any service required of them by the state, this training to equip them to go anywhere and do anything which the state demanded.

by Lord Rosebery. It was not a case of agreement as a result of a personal understanding before hand. It was an occasion on which one great mind enunciated a want of the empire, a want of men on whom the success of Britain was to be maintained as in the past, and in which another great wind expressed its perfect concurrence. Mr. Ballour went further than Lind Riebery and rebaked a tendency of the times, and a tendency to which the conservative party in Canada is very much inclined. There had been times when party differences ran so buch, he said, that some men "were almost proud A lot of Ladies' Fine of the failure of their country if it were cary associated with the official restensibilities of the party to which they did not extension edge, flexible belong." These days, said the speaker, soles, kid tips, have gone, and forever. "I feel sure," be added, "that Lord Rosebery's appeal may be answered without any corresponding danger arising that those who interest themselves in pulities, be they local or impecial, will for one moment forget in their party difference that they belong to a common company."

some politiciane in Canada, and very much to their own and the country's good. At this very time, when our leading men and members of the government are in Washington, seeking to bring to a conclusion Misses Brady and McGuire. The conbasic pard some daids to encessage and United States have been discussed, there are those who are actually hoping for failare and givening over the prospect of it. The conference has been a secret one; at beast the progress made by it and the points on which there has been concurrence or non-concurrence have not been revealed. All that is said, therefore, in repord to the issues under treatment is more surmine. Stall idle remours are gravely commented upon. they are saying something mean about somebody or something. Of course the Mail cannot assume the lofty and elevated position pictured by Mr. Balfour in British politics. That would be too much to expect since it is understood to be true to the traditions of the part, and according to these some one mast be stabled under the fifth rib every day. EUITORIAL NOTES.

Ottawa is doing its enow cleaning on the contract system, the work being given out by wards, and only one ward to one man. The anow is removed from the walks as eyon as it falls, and carted away when it offers any obstruction in the street. Kingston's system of forcing every householder to shovel snow, at his leisure, is very ancient and out-of-date. It is time for a change.

Another grievance disposed of. According to tory testim my Dr. Montizembert, the superintendent general of quarantine, had been removed from office to give place to Dr. Guay. But he has been called to Ottawa, as adviser to the government, in conformity with the plan which the conservatives themselves suggested when Dr. Montizambert became superintendent general. My, what an awful ecandal !

The Telegram is reminded that though Hon. Mr. Sifton has not been posing for conservative support he has had it, so far as the Yukon railway is concerned, from at least two members of the late conservative government, S.r Frank Smith and Sir Charles Tupper. Sir Charles, at the point wards to wiggle out of it, but the fact rem sine that he went to Mr. Sifton an' ofa patriot, but became a putty man.

A premy wedding was celebrated on tank gov by day at the residence of Dr. 1. D. Wartman, Nanance, when his neice. Mass Europa Wareman was united in marriage to Waller S. Nagent, Newborge. The wedding was very quiet and uncetentations, only the immediate relatives and friends being present. The ceremony was performed by the Rev Dr. Crothers The Mr. Balfour endersed the stand taken brids was given away by her uncle, Dr. C. D Wartman, and looked charming in her travelling tress of sage green and carried a large bouquet of white chrysanthemums. The bridesmaid was Miss Ida Nagent, sister of the groom, who also carried a large boungest of white chrysanthemums and looked very pretty. Little Muss Annie McKim acted as maid of honor and looked very sweet in a dress of cream cashmers with silk trimmings. Master Clarence Wartman acted as page and was dressed in brown velvet. The groom was assisted by his bronher, Henry Nugent, of Newburgh After a sumptuous wedding breakfast was partaken of the happy couple were driven to the G. T R. station and rock the train for the west. The esteem in which the young couple are held was testified by the beautiful and useful presents they received, and they will carry with them to their new home at Newburgh, where they will reside on their return the best wishes of a large circle of friends.
