Conspiracy Against Croker - Valuable Testimony of an Independent Democrathe Journal - A Scene in Military Circles -If They Could Not Fight They Wanted to Return Home-The Action of a Mob of Ruffans.

(Special Correspondence, Letter No. 1:23) New York, Nov. 25,-We would all | ike to know what the government is doing at this mom at, and get at the state secrets which the honorable box for three weeks after the enterprising newspapers have given them to the public; the answer is not as easy as one would supp se. Strange indeed is the reflection, while the tramp of our mailed armics heard in distant lands and among he islands of the sea, that fashion parades its curled darlings in the tark and at the horse show which has been the leading feature of the week. The entries have not been as numerous as in former years, but the quality has been superb; society has come forward with its very fine a stock and in its richest robes, and the results of the verdicts of the various classes has been on the whole satifactory; always remembering that when one gets the prize a hundred firmly believe that the blue ribbon should have been awarded to them, As we wander from stall to stall ac miring the equine beauties, the hought is 6 red upon us, if manking had cally exercised a tithe of the care in the breeding and care of its own

Those whose succestors, wandered over the deserts' purning sands with the sors of Ishmael hundreds of years ago, whose history and redigree is preserved with is sacred care as the koran by the toowers of the prophet, the talmud by he Hebrews, or the bible by the felowers of Jesus Christ, have left the stump of their character behind, which stands among horsemen like minted cold.

if the slough of despond and given it a new letter of life for mercy knows how many years. With a hundred million follars annually to disburse each year they may hold on tall doomsday. In the week just passed it was disovered that a plot was being formed in the democratic club house and right under the nese of the boss to unseat the man who made all these things rossible, and put another in his place. is far is the absolute accessity demended of his being turned down and some other valiant warrior turned up, The meeting was ananimous as to the repriety of the thing. There was one voice, and that was who should bell the eat, and there is where the trouble commenced. In the crowd were old soldiers, men covered with wars that told or battles lost and wonn the long, long ago, Brave they were—there was no doubt of that but in a meeting composed of nearly one hundred old soldiers there was not one of them brave enough to face the old man; so the meeting adjourn ed. It was the old story over again of Action devoured by his own hounds that he loved so well; and thus it ever will be. The danger with them is passed; they can forecast nothing in the future; they forgot Mr. Croker's imperial service in the battle of a year ago, which gave to his party the richest possession within the people's gift, Hear the voice of the Brooklyn Ragle, one of the ablest independent democratic new spapers in the United States. It has for years fought that which people call Crokerism. The Eagle knows the man, root and branch, therefore its testimony is expecially valuable at the present time: "We advise the spect there and all other persons who don't wish to be humbugged not to be gulled by the hue and ery about a dangerous demoratic opposition to Richard Croker. To has not been able to spread him self over the state, but his power in his part of it is unchecked. The vote hat his consideration candidate for the supreme court got is a dishonor to the city but it justifies him in believing that he can do as te pleases and the democrats will fellow him, His collection of mutes is sent to congress. Prosperity attends almost all of his candidates. Any democrat who wants any smallest slice of patronage has to go to Richard Croker. There will be no formidable uprising at present against so strong a power. "Talk of such a rebellion, muttering and grumbling, mostly in secret, there will be and is, but until Mr. Croker is defeated here by the republicans and the control of local affairs taken out of his hands the talk will amount
