

WAS A SWERVE IN DESTINY.

GREAT POLITICAL WORK BY A SMALL BOY.

He Carried in a Yellow Jacket's Nest and Broke Up a Meeting—The District Was Soon Convinced With Laughter and The Candidate Was A Defeated Man.

The above is a fair picture of two faces at the same time. One is a man and the other is a bird. The man is a small boy, the bird is a yellow jacket. The man is carrying the bird in a nest. The man is laughing and the bird is singing. The man is a candidate for the district and the bird is a yellow jacket. The man is a defeated man and the bird is a yellow jacket.

SMILE PROMPTERS.

An Up to Date Event.

Tripping feet of dainty daughters, Slim and fat like a diet, As the eyes own locomotors, And the bigger, slower feet Of the more maternal mothers— Number two, so trim and neat, With their little legs and feet, On the pave makes music sweet, Number nine and all the sizes In between—are on the street.

On the street and all a-bustle, Steering all the soft-way way, Drawn as if by some strong magnet Which both old and young obey— Faded flower and bud of May, Lushly matrons, blossom maidens— Naught can stop them now nor stay As they hurry to the "laughter" That is advertised today.

Zeger faces flushed with thoughts Of spoils that shall be aye a-bought, C. O. D. bright eyes that picture Skirts with ribbon bands in front, Flimsy lawns and rarest laces, Stuffs that are to all intent Lustroous silk and made like it— Every woman now is bent Upon bagging a big bargain At the "petticoat event!"

—Boston Globe.

Mrs. Jones Got Her Revenge Later.

"Wait a minute," said Mrs. Jones to Mrs. Smith, who was making a neighborly call. "I want to show you my winter bonnet."

"I think I saw it," replied Mrs. Smith. "You had it on at church last Sunday, didn't you?"

"Yes. How did you like it?" "Oh, it was just lovely. I'm sure, dear. It looks equally as well as it did last year."

Only a woman could say a thing like that and say it so sweetly that honey would taste sour in comparison.—Chicago News.

American Influence Extending.

Coyote Sam—Hello! I read here that an English judge was sentenced a fellow fer boss strain on the feller jest pulled out a gun an let by two bullets straight 'is bones.

Nevada Ned—Oh, yes. Since this country has showed its lightning qualities in this here war with Spain, an since then English are crazy for an alliance, they're making regular bids of themselves tryin to ape American institutions!—Up to Date.

Campaign Figures.

'Tis not the man whose talk is large on whom you must rely, To steady stick through thin and thick clear to the bitter end. When some lusty shorter hollers That he'll risk ten thousand dollars The voters are to borrow if you've two that you can lend.

When these election arguments grow heated and hot, And for a moment you are yearning with redoubled zeal and ardor, The one who says you'll find it, With the ready cash behind it, From the bank looking man who says he'll be right by your side.—Washington Star.

Not at All.

Mrs. Hanby—Don't you think it's unhealthy for your little girl to fondle that kitten so much? I see she has it in her arms most of the time.

Mrs. Waverick—Oh, no, not at all. We've had it six weeks, and it hasn't been sick a day.

She Will See Him Just as Soon.

"I'm afraid my wife's affection for me is cooling."

"When she bids me goodbye this morning, she didn't say, 'Be sure to hurry home as early as possible!'—Exchange.

Familiarity Breeds Contempt.

All friends desert soon as bad When one is quite far from it. But, oh, it makes one mighty sad To get right up against it! —L. A. W. Bulletin.

A Trick That Paid.

"Mr. Yalshy, may I ask why you always dip your knife in your glass of water before cutting your steak?"

"It is a little trick I learned from a fellow who worked in a rubber factory."—Indianapolis Journal.

Afraid of Them.

Playwright—Why do you decline this play of mine? Manager—I make it a rule never to take an original play, sir. They may be all right, but they won't go.—Detroit Free Press.

A Perverted Sentiment.

"It is a good thing to be a Spaniard, but it is a bad thing to be a Spaniard's friend."

Chivalry Again.

"And what is the big wire enclosure for?"

"That's to hold the St. Louis girls. We couldn't get the horses to promise to come here until it was built."—Good House-keeping.

Mr. Asbury Peppers.

"I'd like to be an astronomer," said the youngest boarder.

"Biggs at fall on earth," said Asbury Peppers. "They sit up of nights trying to con the universe!"

A Loud Call.

"Can't you," she said to Mr. Hall, "Come in and make a quiet call?"

"A quiet call? Not very well, but I can make a football yell." —Evansville Plain Dealer.

Kept It Cool.

"You say you didn't suffer with the heat while you were with the army?"

"Not at all, not at all. You see, I had it all fixed so that I got letters regularly from a Boston girl."

Her Dream.

Wife—John, I wish you would let me have $50 this morning.

Husband—My dear, you must have dreamed that I married an heiress, didn't you?"

An Observation.

FIVE SNOWSTORMS AT ONCE.

A Startling and Grand Panorama That Moved Before Virginia City.

"Virginia City," said Says Noble, a Nevada ranchman, "is pretty well up in the world, as any one knows who has ever been there, and there are few localities in all the Rocky mountain region from which a wider range of country can be taken in at one view. Owing to that fact some very beautiful, striking and unusual sights are frequently seen by the dwellers in that favored city almost within soundness of some of their own feet. I have witnessed some of them myself, and one in particular I remember. In fact, it was a sight that no one having sense could ever forget. It was a moving panorama, grand and impressive in the extreme, being no less than five distinct snowstorms raging among the mountains and deserts to the eastward, while in the city not a flake of snow was falling. The storms represented all degrees of fierceness and covered an area of at least 100 miles. The one furthest to the east, and at the same time the most northerly one, was apparently passing directly over the 40 mile desert. It was as black as a thunder cloud so dense was the whirling body of snow, and was perhaps 10 miles in diameter. Any one in the midst of it would have been willing to swear that a snowstorm must be raging over the entire continent, but just to the north of it several tall, stately peaks rose out of the snowstorm and towered above it in the full splendor of sunlight. The high hills that lay beyond the storm were shut off from sight as though by a gigantic black curtain.

"Scarcely, and to the southward, another storm, not so black and fierce as the first, but still dense enough to hide all the region behind it, was in less active progress. It crept along toward the east, reaching from the level of the Carson valley upward to the very clouds where it was being raised in the heavens. Still nearer, and between the city and the mountains of Como a lighter storm yet, only one or two or three miles in width, passed on its way. Through this the mountain peaks could be seen dimly in a thin fog. A mile further south a fourth snow storm, smaller in area than even the last one, but as black and tempestuous as the great blizzard that, with the sun touching its crown, was sweeping the 10 mile desert raged in a awful fury. All behind it was, but as with the fall of the blackest night. Miles away, further up to the southward, the fifth storm, a vast and violent one, was sweeping along, covering and hiding a range of 50 miles of high hills.

"Between these several storm bodies hills, plains and mountain peaks stood revealed as far as the eye could see, all lying in the glory of a late October sun. The gleaming peaks that rose golden far above the black masses of storm as they raged in fury at the mountain bases and for up their rocky sides made a particularly striking and awesome part of that strange picture."

Blank Kisses While Cars Waited.

It happened at Fifth and Walnut streets at an hour when the streets were crowded. The flagman had signaled an approaching northeast electric railway car to stop and give the right of way to a south bound Westport car. Standing in the center of the network of tracks were two women. It was evident that they had been chance after a long separation. They rushed into each other's arms and were smothering each other's faces with kisses.

"Look out ahead!" shouted the gripman on the cable car at the top of his voice. The flagman waved his club frantically about his head and elevated his voice in an effort to attract the attention of the two women. But they stood as if glued to the spot, and were deaf to the cries of danger. The more reckless one more kiss, and then one of the women happened to glance over her shoulder and beheld the gripman yanking away at the brakes in an effort to bring his car to a standstill. The air about was perfectly blue.

Why He Did Not Flinch.

Some hunter was being unloaded on Barone street when a piece slipped and hit the sidewalk with a report like a torpedo. Everybody jumped except the man who was standing with his back to the pile, quietly smoking a cigar. He kept on puffing, and didn't even take the trouble to look around.

"That's a man of nerve," said the physician of the neighborhood. "I would have known it, even without this incident. Look at his profile and take particular note of that narrow, projecting jaw and those eyes in a perfectly straight line. When you see a man put up that way, don't monkey with him too freely. Such a face always denotes the rare blend of moral and physical courage that constitutes a real valor. A fellow couldn't scare that chap with a ton of dynamite."

"Not a word you let off," heard him," remarked a bystander, "because he's stone deaf."

Fountain Inkblots—Fountain Pens. Matthew Henry, in his commentary on the vision of the "wondrous stick of gold and two olive trees by it," mentions "mountain inkblots" and "fountain pens." What were they? He says:

"This candlestick had one bowl, or common reservoir, at the top, into which all pens were continually dipping, and from it, by seven secret pipes, or passages, it was diffused to the seven lamps. So that, without any further care, they received oil as fast as they wanted it. In those which we call fountain inkblots or fountain pens, they never wanted, nor were ever glutted, and so left always burning clear."—Notes and Queries.

Novel Stage Waterfall.

An ingenious stage waterfall devised by M. Galland has attracted attention at the Paris opera halls. It is made of tulle stretched on frames, imitating the curves of a fall. Behind it little streams of water are discharged through perforated pipes against a metal plate, so as to throw a spray upon the tulle. When the electric light is played on this, the effect is magical.
