PROFESSOR E. R. A. SELIGMAN. modern scientific education and in the still more difficult task of adding to the sum of human knowledge. Professor Seligman overcame the temptation to live a life of ease, and early developed remarkable talent as a student. At about the age when most boys are entering college he had finished his course at Columbia and started for Europe. He studied at Paris, Heidelberg, Berlin, Genoa and other universities, mastering most of the European languages and gaining an acquaintance with the best European thought. He now reads with ease not only French and German, but Italian, Spanish, Dutch, and, in fact, all of the languages in which any notable economic works are written. Returning to New he studied law and political science at Columbia, and in 1884 won the valuable degree of doctor of philosophy. In the following year he became a lecturer in political economy at Columbia, and in 1891 was promoted to his present position.

Professor Seligman is only 36 years old, but be has already written several books that have justly received the highest praise from the leading American and European critics. His chosen field is finance, the science that deals with the revenue and expenditure of the state, being often identifled with inxation. No other man who writes the English language commands the same authority in this field. His first of the American Commonwealths," pubassociation. It furnishes the basis for much of his later work and still remains the great arsenal of facts for the student of American taxation.

In 1892 appeared his important work on the "Shifting and Incidence of Taxation." We all know that the person who pays tax sometimes shifts it. Thus, the book dealer who imports books for his customers pays the tariff duty or tax to the government and then adds it to the price of the books. This amounts to saying that the to determine who finally pays the tax. It adelphia Times. is easy to see what a difficult problem this is. Take, for example, our real estate tax, in which the land and the building thereon are assessed. The owner, of course, pays the tax in the first instance, but does it follow that it must come out of his pocket in the long run? Not at all. He will add that part of the tax which is assessed on the house to the rent he charges the tenants, because otherwise the profits of house owners would fall below other

It is not to be wondered at that Professor Seligman's advice is often sought by the tax reformers in our legislatures. When the income tax of 1894 was being debated in the house of representatives, a congressman wrote to the professor asking where he could find something about the English income tax, information which is given in the most elementary university course on finance. In Europe such a scientist would be called upon to take an active and open years ago farreaching tax reforms were put through in Holland by Professor Pierson, who was not only a leading econo-

M. Piesse, in his interesting work on gardens spend thousands for the gratification of the eye, they altogether neglect the nose. Why should we not grow flowers for their odors as well as for their colors? And we may add, the ladies may utilize some of our own waste garden perfumes very easily and with pecuniary advantage to themselves. Heliotrope, the lily of the valley, honeysuckle, myrtle, clove pink and wallflower perfumes, such as we get in the shops, are made up odors, cunningly contrived from other flowers. Yet they may be made pure with a little trouble. "I want heliotrope pomade," says M. Plesse, in despuir. "I would buy any amount that I could get." And the way to get it is very simple. If there is a glue pot in the house and it happens to be clean, fill it with clarified fat, set it near the hothouse fire, or any other fire, just to make the fut liquid, and throw in as many heliotrope flowers as possible; let them remain for 24 hours, strain off the fat and add fresh ones; repeat this process for a week and the fat will have become a pomade a la heliotrope. The same process may be gone through with with all the other flowers mentioned. A lady may in this manner make her own perfume, and we may add, in the words of M. Piesse, "one that she cannot obtain for love or money at the perfumer's."-New York Herald.

THE FIRST BALLOON.

How the Wonderful Airship Came to Be

The word balloon means "a large ball." To Montgolfier of Annonay, France, the invention of the balloon is credited. It is said that he was led to turn his attention to balloon making from the following in-

A French laundress, wishing to dry a petticoat quickly, placed it on a basket work frame over a stove. To prevent the heat from escaping by the opening at the top of the pettionat she drew the belt strings closely together and tied them. Gradually the garment dried and became lighter, and as the stove continued to give out heat and York in 1882, when he was 21 years old, | rarefy the air concentrated under the basket work frame, the petticoat began to move, and finally rose in the air. This so estonished the laundress that she ran to her neighbors and asked them to come and witness the strange sight. Montgolffer was among those that came in. The petticoat suspended in midair suggested greater things to him, and he returned home with "something to think

He at once began studying works on different kinds of atmosphere, and the invention of the balloon was the result. The first public ascent by the Montgolder balloon was made June 5, 1783. It was a spherical bag, consisting of pieces important work was "Finance Statistics of linea buttoned together, suspended from cross poles. A fire was kindled under it, lished in 1989 by the American Statistical | and the flames were fed with bundles of chopped straw. The loose bag filled out, assumed a graceful form, and in a short time was completely distended. At a given signal the stays were slipped and the balloon instantly ascended. Its velocity accelerated until it reached some height, then became uniform and carried it to an elevation of more than a mile. For ten minutes it remained suspended, then fell gently in a vineyard nearly two miles dis-

Workmen as Contractors.

A system of public work that has much to commend it is that of "co-operative contract," in vogue in New Zealand. U der that system a public work is divided TOF into small sections by the engineer in charge, and an estimate is made of its cost. Each section is then let out to a group of workmen, who do the work under a foreman of their own choosing, but who receives no more than his fellows. They obtain the full profit which would otherwise go to professional contractors, and they share the payment equally.

Each worker is interested in seeing that his companions do their full amount of work, and the sooner the job is performed the greater the return for a day's work. If any tools are needed which the men do not own, the government supplies them at a moderate rental. The adoption of this system should provide a method whereby part in framing new tax laws. Only two direct employment by the government would be consistent with a full return for the money expended, giving to the community an advantage in the economical execution of public enterprises equal to that enjoyed by private employers.—Re-
