HUGH JOHN'S PLANS.

H. J. Macdonald, who, after his retirement from the dominion house, was elected leader of the Manitoba local opposition, is said to be now in most excellent humour. He has spent some months in touring about Manitoba talking politics, election plans, and has just reached Winnipeg for rest and recreation. Of course he found the province very much dissatisfied with the rule of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Mr. Greenway. All his party now wants is an opportunity to show what it can do. At the same time he is candid enough to confess that his party has made its mistakes. "During the last few years," he said, "the party has been practically split asunder by the school question, and many hundreds of men who have never polled a liberal vote went to the polls and marked their ballots for the liberal candidates on the 22nd of June, 1896." Why? "Because of their conscientious views on the vexed question of the Manitoba schools, and it is necessary, if the conservative party are to succeed in the next provincial election, that this breach should be healed, and that all our friends should agree to forget past differences and to work together as of yore." Which means, if anything, that the conservative party of Manitoba is through with the school agitation, that it has accepted the vote of the people in the last election as a final deliverance upon the question, and that there will not be a resurrection of it. Hugh John himself, however, wobbled a good deal in the campaign aforesaid. Sir Charles Tupper was so headstrong, so determined to stand by the remedial bill as something which was calculated to hold the constitution together, that Mr. Macdonald, seemingly against his own inclination and conviction, had to do a little hedging, but having got free of this situation, and all its embarrassments, he is bound to remain free. With or without the school question, however, he has a long-headed and shrewd man to deal with in Hon. Mr. Greenway, whose surrender to his opponents is not at all apparent.

ROBBING THE FARMERS.

Grave rumors reach here from Manitoba. They are to the effect that a syndicate, or a syndicate of syndicates, (an expression now used to indicate the strength and power of the combination) has been formed, the object of which is to rob the farmers in the manipulation of the wheat market. The idea is to establish prices, which shall be fixed or altered as a central bureau may decide, and that all over Manitoba these prices shall prevail. The aim is not, however, to set up a universal rating in the interest of the farmer, as the touters of the concern would have the veridants believe, but to set down the rating so that it will be all the way from six to ten cents a bushel below what it would be were the grain syndicates operating independently and in competition. The facts have leaked out and made a great commotion in Manitoba. The Tribune, of Winnipeg, edited by Mr. Richardson, M.P., and having the best available information in regard to the matter, declares that "a conspiracy has been formed, and that it is arranged that the entire wheat of the country shall be purchased and controlled by one mammoth combine." It goes further and asserts that the banks have joined with the conspirators, "and have agreed not to assist any buyer who does not belong to the syndicate." What is the calculation? To rob the farmers of at least a million dollars in the marketing of this year's crop. The Tribune suggests that the situation, which it is studying, may require the Greenway government to take a hand in the grain business, by establishing agencies for the purchase of the grain at all accessible points, and seeing that the crop is moved to Fort William, where the grain can be disposed of readily and in the world's competition. "There would be no danger of any loss to the province," says the Tribune, "for the government could undoubtedly make contracts with eastern people to take all the Manitoba hard wheat which could be forwarded at a price that would pay. Another important object that would be served by such action would be to prevent the mixing of our wheat with inferior grades, and would greatly tend to enhance and maintain the reputation of Manitoba hard wheat." It would be a unique proceeding for a local government to undertake the smothering of grain corners and combines; but Mr. Greenway is a farmer legislator who has usually a unique way of serving the people of his province.

RECORD COMES TO KINGSTON.

Myers Beats All Rivals in Double Century Run. F. O. Myers succeeded yesterday in lowering the Canadian and also the American records for the double century bicycle run. He completed the trip between Kingston and Belleville twice in fifteen hours and thirty-one minutes. The American record, held by O'Connor, the "American road king," is fifteen hours and forty-seven minutes. Gimpert, of Toronto, holds the Canadian record—seventeen hours, twenty-five minutes. Thus Myers holds the continental record, beating the Yankee time by sixteen minutes and the Canadian by one hour, fifty-four minutes. The feat was accomplished on an eighty gear Cleveland bicycle.

Rained His Own Fees.

ONDENBURG, N.Y., Sept. 16.—The city authorities having ordered W. Judson, son of the late Gen. Judson, to trim the trees in front of his residence, in order to keep the electric wires clear of the limbs, he proceeded to do so. Hiring four men, he set them to work at night, and the whole row running along the curb in front of his property were stripped of every branch, twig and leaf, leaving them standing like naked telegraph poles. The appearance of the street has been ruined for years, and the neighbors have put in a vigorous protest.

A Part of The Booty.

A local hotel keeper received, the other evening, an assigned $5 bill, which is undoubtedly believed to be one of those stolen from the Napanee branch of the Dominion bank. It was handed in by a stranger who called for a drink and tendered the bill in payment. Its peculiarity was not noticed until the stranger had departed.

SANDFIELD'S SURPLUS.

Mr. Whitney's great complaint against the liberal government—when he has not Col. Mathison with him, and when out campaigning—is that it has "dissipated" the surplus of dear old Sandfield Macdonald. And when they use the word "dissipated" they evidently mean wasted. That is the ordinary interpretation of the word when used in this connection.

An examination into the facts makes it hard for those complainers to justify their language. Sandfield's surplus would still be to the fore had he not himself made plans for its "dissipation," and plans which his successors had the good sense to carry out. The surplus was created by an excess of revenue over expenditure, the revenue being from the sale of crown lands and timber added to the subsidy granted by the dominion and agreed upon at the time of confederation. As one who knows all the facts has clearly pointed out, Hon. Sandfield Macdonald, for whom everyone now has a good word, "laid the foundation of a policy which has been continued ever since, the object of which was to return to the people a large proportion of what had been taken from them by direct taxation." It was Hon. Sandfield Macdonald who established the deaf and dumb institute at Belleville, the asylum for the blind at Brantford, the insane asylum of London, the Central prison at Toronto, and the agricultural college at Guelph; and lest all these would not "dissipate" the surplus that accumulated before he committed the province to them, he went to the people in an election, in which he was not successful, with a scheme of railway aid that involved the expenditure of a million and a half of dollars.

Now the liberal government came into power, in 1871, and what could it do but follow up this good work of Hon. Mr. Macdonald—enterprises that not a tory dare rise and dishonor or disown—and see that the hopes that were entertained in regard to it were verified. What have these liberals done? The Brantford Expositor puts it in a nutshell:

"They have greatly increased the asylum accommodation for lunatics and idiots. They have continued the system of aiding local railways. They have added a provincial prison for female convicts. They have systematized and increased the grants in aid of hospitals and charities. They have organized a service for the rescue of waifs and strays who are in danger of becoming pests to society. They have established a forestry department to promote the construction of good roads. They have dealt liberally with learned societies and with exhibition associations. They have settled the municipal loan fund difficulty by a direct distribution of a large part of the surplus which had accrued during Sandfield Macdonald's regime and the early years of their own. They have greatly increased the amounts paid annually out of the provincial treasury for the promotion of education, for the construction of colonization lands and for the local administration of justice."

In explaining about the expenditure of the liberals Mr. Whitney, and his echoes, are not sufficiently explicit. What would they do if put into office? Would they cut off the grants to hospitals and charities and asylums? Would they impair the usefulness of these institutions? Would they make no provision for the increase of misfortune as the population of the province increases? What would they do? They should be more definite. They should be plain, clear, emphatic. They have an opportunity every year, during the session of the legislature, to criticize the expenditure. What is the sum total of grants to which they have made objection, and the dissipation of which gives some of them a pain?

In this department, as in all others in the store, the decorative effects are peculiarly beautiful and striking. The goods are arranged in such locations and positions as to show them to the best advantage, while producing the most pleasing effects. Flowers and plants are placed at intervals and tend to make monotony impossible. The firm carries a very heavy stock of fine furs, which are placed near the entrance, in good light, where they may be freely and closely examined. In house furnishings the goods are all of the very newest and of the latest designs. An unusually large range of chenille curtains and table covers is shown, all artistically draped.

All the latest styles and patterns in gents' furnishings are shown, and the firm's prices are as low as the lowest, consistent with giving goods that can be relied upon. A dress-making establishment is carried on in connection with the store, and here the large number of employees are kept constantly busy.

All in all the store is a thoroughly up-to-date one, of which the proprietors and Kingstonians may well be proud.

Sharpton Sayings.

SMARTON, Sept. 15.—H. Alport who has been unwell, is around again. Mr. McKinley after several months working on Wolfe Island is home for a time. Mr. Brethren, wife and family and his mother-in-law, Mrs. Cronk, Rochester, spent a week visiting his parents here. Dr. Bell, V.S., late of Kingston, who has been in Rochester, has left one of his thorough bred stallions with his uncle, W. Bell, of this place.

W. McKinley talks of going west. Miss Mary Smith is on the sick list. Smith brothers are threshing in Glenburnie. Several attended the lecture on the Armenian question by a native the other night at Glenvale. His grace archbishop Cleary is announced to meet the people of Railton mission at St. Patrick's church, Railton, on Sunday next. J. McKee who has been several months working in New York state, after visiting here, has gone to visit people at Erinville. At a sheriff's sale, which took place adjacent to here, things sold remarkably well. J. Baker is working about Bath. As yet we have had no killing frost.

Cataract Localities.

CATARAQUI, Sept. 16.—The village paths which replaced the wooden sidewalks, have been freshly sanded, and are much improved. There will be an all day service in the Free Methodist church next Sabbath; the occasion is the regular quarterly meeting in connection with that church. Mr. Hooper has given his house a fresh coat of paint. The ladies' aid of the Methodist church hold a "grape social" in the basement this evening. Miss Bourke, sister of Mrs. (Dr.) McBride, who visited here last spring, has returned from her home in Heathcote, and proposes spending the winter in this vicinity. Mr. and Mrs. H. Simpson, who have been visiting friends at Oliver's Ferry, have returned. Mrs. Northmore, who accompanied them, does not return for some days yet. Miss Nicol has returned from a short visit at Lynn. Capt. and Miss Brooks have returned from England, where they have been spending the summer. J. L. Haycock, M.P.P., has returned from attending the patron convention in Toronto. Miss Walker, of Kingston, spent Sabbath at the home of her father. Miss Grace Nicol has returned to her duties in Toronto. Miss Hensie, of Kingston, spent Sabbath with Miss Leashey. Miss Boyd, of Toronto, is visiting at Dr. McBride's.

That Is So.

Why send your work out of the city when you can have it done far better and just as promptly at the Kingston laundry over Baker's gents' furnishing store, phone 22. Parcels called for and delivered.

A MODERN EMPORIUM.

Starr & Sutcliffe's Palatial Store—Their Fall Opening.

Starr & Sutcliffe held their fall opening of millinery and dry goods yesterday, and the affair was attended by a large number of the friends and customers of the store. The millinery department, under the charge of Miss B. Lodge, would do credit to any similar establishment in a city much larger than Kingston. The goods are all new, some recently imported, others made up on the premises. The London and Paris hats are beautiful in design and trimming, and are of many different shapes and styles. Notable among them was a very pretty creation known as the Roeli, with wide rim of grey velvet and cream with steel ornaments in front, and two large grey and cream plumes tipping the back; the whole is finished with a large bird and steel buckles. Another particularly taking "gem" is a large picture hat with turquoise puffing round the rim, faced with black velvet on the side, crown of gold and jet, and prettily trimmed with black ostrich tips and cock's feathers. The Nadia toque is of green velvet, and black and green sequin crown, with black and white trim; a very handsome bird tips the front with a large bow of green ribbon. The toque is finished with brilliant ornaments. The Colibri bonnet is a very handsome head-dress, with jet crown and bands of chenille; full puffing of black velvet, egret and jet, a band of black ostrich tips across the back, and finished with black buckles. Another large picture hat is of green velvet, with four bunches of rose on the side of the rim, with a mount of pleated ribbon, fawn ostrich tips drooping over the back, and finished with steel buckles. The Watteau is a very handsome walking hat of soft colored velvet, with pink crown and edge, and with white paradise opeyres and ostrich tips to match. Out steel buckles lend a very brilliant and artistic finish.

The stock of ribbons, etc., is unusually large, and very complete. All the colors of the rainbow are shown, and combinations and variations of different colors and shades give an effect that is at once dazzling and brilliant.

Descending from the millinery departments, on the second story, to the regular dry goods departments, on the ground floor, the stock is found to be very large, and new throughout. The dress goods department contains an unusually large stock of the latest creations, in all materials and colors. Silks in green and purple shades seem to be the very latest fashion, and they are to be found here in endless variety. One beautiful effect that is sold at remarkably low price is in French silk and wool mixture.

In this department, as in all others in the store, the decorative effects are peculiarly beautiful and striking. The goods are arranged in such locations and positions as to show them to the best advantage, while producing the most pleasing effects. Flowers and plants are placed at intervals and tend to make monotony impossible. The firm carries a very heavy stock of fine furs, which are placed near the entrance, in good light, where they may be freely and closely examined. Two Divorces in One Term.

A St. Louis Woman's Lightning Divorce and Marriage Record. Chicago must give up to St. Louis the palm for lightning divorces and double quick marriages. Mrs. Guslo Campbell Spencer of the latter city has recently distinguished herself and incidentally humiliated Chicago by getting two divorces during one term of the St. Louis county court. Two days after her second divorce she was again married to her first husband, William Spencer, while the divorce, Dr. Henry K. Winslow, conceded himself by taking a wife at Kansas City.

Last June Mrs. Spencer was divorced from her husband, William Spencer, on the grounds of drunkenness and abuse. She resumed her maiden name of Campbell, and a fortnight later was married in Chicago to Dr. Henry J. Winslow. Six days later Dr. Winslow left his bride and went to Kansas City with Mrs. Marder of Chicago. A few days ago Mrs. Winslow secured a divorce from him in the same court where her first divorce had been granted only a short time before.

In the meantime Spencer had abandoned his drinking habits. The couple became reconciled and were remarried. And Dr. Winslow made the story complete by marrying Mrs. Marder, who had just been divorced from Walter Marder, the Chicago type founder.

It is to be hoped that all parties are satisfied now.

UNDER A CURSE.

Theresa Goeke Believed to Be Possessed of a Devil.

The case of Theresa Goeke baffles the medical profession of St. Louis. She lies at the City hospital and has all the symptoms of being possessed of a devil, or evil spirit, as it was known in the time of Christ and his disciples.

Is it obsession, mental aberration, hysteria grandeur, insanity or an ailment resulting from natural causes? The common practitioner says it is the result of physical derangement; the main specialists say insanity; the occultists or scientists say obsession, or the control of an evil spirit, while many declare it to be a form of hysteria.

Although she has been raised in a strictly simple and religious way, and has, until taken with her present malady, been a devout Catholic, her blasphemous language would shock the toughest sailor. She curses the cross. She would burn the bones of God. She would annihilate priests. She believes herself a devil, and would drink holy water, thereby desecrating it to the most unholily of unholy fies.

Her hands and feet are manacled or she would tear her flesh into shreds.

Everything takes on the look of hell, and she sees in the seething furnace recognized friends and rejoices therein. The sight of her mother in the lower regions causes her no sorrow.

Nothing appears as it should be to her. Even the water she drinks turns to green reptiles and the vilest of conceptions. Bees sting her continually, flies get into her eyes, nose and mouth, and she sees the walls, the bed, the place swarming with them. Insects of the most tortuous descriptions consume her body.

When she believes herself the devil, her conceptions are that she is huge and mighty and can command the world, and that horns grow from the sides of her head.

When she is pursued by the devil, everything takes the form of one, and there are thousands pursuing her of every kind and description. There are devils with green hair and faces, devils with red faces and hair of flames, devils with black faces, devils with crooked noses, devils with a long, sharp beak covered with thorns. These are the angles to his satanic majesty, and they have black wings.

The chief ruler over hell, as she conceives it in her writhing agony, is 50 times the size of an ordinary man, is black, with eyes of fire, and his touch will kill.

Theresa's mother, a hard working German woman, attributes her condition to a spell cast over her two years ago. She says:

"Theresa was working for a lady and she wanted to leave. But made the lady angry, and she stamped her foot and said: 'From this day you will never have any luck no matter where you go. I wish it, and it will be so.' That is what she said, and she cast a spell on my child."

Theresa's mental trouble began then and has been steadily growing worse ever since.

Open House for Millinery Lovers.

The Bonnets and Hats and Flowers and Birds and Wings have captured the feminine heart. Beauty reigns. Paris, London and our own artists contribute. Styledom is at 118 and 120 Princess Street.

Millinery elegance, Mantle beauty, Dress Goods and Silk elegance—and still this collection is only merchandise and is priced most modestly—priced fairly. That's the keynote to perfect storekeeping—that's our way.

As magical as Jack Frost's tracery this changing of a perfect Summer store into a perfect store for supplying Autumn and Winter needs. But somebody has been planing and working. Those stocks were timed in their arrival and just when you want them. They're here. For instance, Women's, Misses' and Children's Jackets & Wraps.

A great stock, every garment new, every garment this season's best style. Because we price them so low is no reason why you should think they can't be good or that you should confound them with antique styles offered by others at low prices to sell what should have been sold two and four years ago. Comparison of values will settle the fact that buying can be done best here.
