++++++++++++ Letter by Geraldine.

During the fair week the Toront street car conductors were continually worried by country visitors who could not understand the transfer system. The papers revived the old story of the man vho saw some of the passengers geting transfer tickets, and who thereapon called the conductor, and complained that he had been given no reeipt for his fare. They also told of the woman who insisted upon having ransfer given her, and when asked where she wanted to go, she said, "Go? don't want to go anywhere else tolay. I am ready to drop now; but you're giving those to people who pay no more than five cents, I may as well have one too." So the conductor gave her an unpunched transfer, which she pocketed, and at her boarding-house corner'she left the car, satisfied that the had not been cheated out of anything that was to be had for her fare. We had a little experience of our own about these same transfers, although we were by no means willing to admit ourselves to be "country" visitors. We had taken the College and Carlton street car, and had transfers for Church street, going south. But, when we were deposited at the corner of Carlton and Church streets, we found that the car was not within sight, and we saw no reason why, instead of standing in the hot sun at a brewery corner, we should not walk up Church street until we met t, and thus see the houses in the intervening blocks. No sooner said than lone, and as we passed first one corner and then another, and still no car appeared, we congratulated ourselves that we hurried to catch it at Maitland street. But when the conductor asked for our fares and we presented our transfers he looked first at them, then at us, and said, "What's them?": and immediately we knew that we had been ! guilty of a brach of street car etiquette. Explanations followed, and when we enquired if it were not allowable to walk up to meet a car that was not in sight, he scrutched his cheek thoughtfully, and answered, "Well s'pose it's all right at exhibition time,' in a tone that implied his willingness to

The papers have lately recorded the death of Mrs. Kohler, of Mount Vernon, New York at the advanced age of ninety-Mrs. Kohler, in her girlhood, as Amelia Offergeld, is credited with having inspired Tom Moore with the idea of that well known ballad, which was so copular with the past generation, The Last Rose of Summer." Miss Offergeld was one of the pupils at a school kept by Moore's sister, and, one day when the poet was walking through the school garden, this young lady plucked the only remaining rose from a bush, and presented it to him, saying, "Now have given you the last rose of summer. The latest fad that has been introduced in New York is the new hand shake, which has entirely superseded the socalled "Kangaroo" grasp. The up-todate variety is really no shake at all; the hand is extended high, much as if B. L. attractive to people with old-fashioned hand, but it is the "new shake," it is the fashion, and the New Yorkers have accepted it with enthusiasm.

One may surely be pardoned for talking about the weather, after such a glorious week as we have had. Summer the leaves, on trees and shrubs, were touched with the "golden promise of glorious death," and have since fallen from their parent branches, the sweet warm breath of summer has returned, and lingered with us, fairly chasing autumn out of what he may duly consider as his rights in the last week of September. The golfers are rejoicing over this deal weather for their game, and are in hopes that it may continue until the

On the same day a cosy little circle, numbering not more than fifteen or sixteen, gathered at afternoon tea in Mrs. Forster's pretty rooms at Rockwood hospital, in honor of Miss Graydon, of London. Miss Nash and Miss Peirce presided at the tea table, and amongst the guests were Mrs. W. B. Skinner, Misses Bermingham, I. Cartwright, Cooke, C. Cooke, tallaghan, E. Callaghan, Daly, DePencier, Richmond, and F. Richmond, Straubenzie, and E. Straubenzie.

Another social affair last Saturday afternoon was a river party given by Miss Marion Calvin, in honor of her cousin, Miss Elsie Fry, of Quebec. The "Blue Bell" carried the party down the river, touching for a little while at a lovely spot on the main shore. Should He Sent Back. Huron Expositor, Seaforth.

A contemporary says: "It will be pity if Mr. Haycock is not re-elected. He is a shrewd and capable man, and steered a pretty straight course. A liber al is in the field against him in Frontenac, and of course if the two run a tory will go in flying. It was a tory riding: Haycock carried it by 130 through his personal popularity and the strength of patronism at that time." Mr. Haycock is the leader of the patron party in the Ontario legislature. From a personal knowledge of him we have no hesitation in endorsing the above. It will be a distinct loss to the province should he not be in the next legislature. The Frontenac liberals would act wisely by withdrawing their candidate and all turning in and supporting Mr. Haycock. IT'S HARD TO DO ! Everybody can't make good furniture. get as much art goes into the making of our chairs as ever went into the finest picture. Everybody can't make good furniture. It takes knack, and talent and practice. When you are out prospecting for a satisfactory fur-niture store don't pass us by. We are vain enough to think that there isn't another store quite so full of beauty and style as ours. It will certainly do no harm to visit us.
