IMPROVING THE MILITIA. The order, retiring those who have been colonels of regiments and battalions for five years, is causing a commotion. Some of the best men in the service are being set aside, and it is inferred by some that the test of seventy-five years, the places of these enthusiasts cannot be filled. That, of course, is an erroneous conclusion. The oldest of men must, in or the like, it will pay you to time, give way to others, and the work write to us for proots of what goes on apace as if nothing has happened.
